

This is a digital copy of a book that was preserved for generations on library shelves before it was carefully scanned by Google as part of a project to make the world's books discoverable online.

It has survived long enough for the copyright to expire and the book to enter the public domain. A public domain book is one that was never subject to copyright or whose legal copyright term has expired. Whether a book is in the public domain may vary country to country. Public domain books are our gateways to the past, representing a wealth of history, culture and knowledge that's often difficult to discover.

Marks, notations and other marginalia present in the original volume will appear in this file - a reminder of this book's long journey from the publisher to a library and finally to you.

Usage guidelines

Google is proud to partner with libraries to digitize public domain materials and make them widely accessible. Public domain books belong to the public and we are merely their custodians. Nevertheless, this work is expensive, so in order to keep providing this resource, we have taken steps to prevent abuse by commercial parties, including placing technical restrictions on automated querying.

We also ask that you:

- + Make non-commercial use of the files We designed Google Book Search for use by individuals, and we request that you use these files for personal, non-commercial purposes.
- + Refrain from automated querying Do not send automated queries of any sort to Google's system: If you are conducting research on machine translation, optical character recognition or other areas where access to a large amount of text is helpful, please contact us. We encourage the use of public domain materials for these purposes and may be able to help.
- + Maintain attribution The Google "watermark" you see on each file is essential for informing people about this project and helping them find additional materials through Google Book Search. Please do not remove it.
- + Keep it legal Whatever your use, remember that you are responsible for ensuring that what you are doing is legal. Do not assume that just because we believe a book is in the public domain for users in the United States, that the work is also in the public domain for users in other countries. Whether a book is still in copyright varies from country to country, and we can't offer guidance on whether any specific use of any specific book is allowed. Please do not assume that a book's appearance in Google Book Search means it can be used in any manner anywhere in the world. Copyright infringement liability can be quite severe.

JOSIAH PENDARVIS, JUNIOR
WHO CHANGED HIS NAME
TO JOSIAH BEDON.

"I must not forget my attachment to genealogy and everything relating to it, because it is the greatest spur to noble and gallant actions."

James B. Heyward.

On the next page will be seen an old residence now in Legare Street, Charleston, South Carolina. Erected not long after the Revolution by one of the ancestors of the compiler, it represents the more substantial architecture of that day. It was the home of the parents of the compiler during his boyhood.

"It is a reverend thing to see an ancient castle or building not in decay, or to see a fair timber tree sound and perfect; how much more to behold an ancient gentle family which hath stood against the waves and weathers of time."

INTRODUCTION.

After many years of persistent research and careful preparation, this record is now presented for the use of the family.

These records will be easily followed if the reader will note that each individual of the "blood" is categorically listed by seniority of birth, and given a cardinal number as a child in the family group.

In succeeding generations as each male or female (by marriage) begins a new group, his or her cardinal number will be found in large type on the left of that individual, and his or her name will be in capitals. The figures above such couple indicate the direct ancestral lineage of that group, so that the respective cardinal lineage numbers of any two groups when placed alongside of each other (regardless of names), will disclose at a glance the degree of consanguinity of any two individuals in said groups.

In every family group, the date of birth or death of each child, when known, is given; and for the purpose of a more easy identification in succeeding generations, the name of the husband or wife, which such child afterward marries, is added.

Immediately preceding the list of the issue of any couple, all that could be learned as to the direct lineage of the husband or wife, who there intermarried with the Bedon blood, is narrated. That there should be no error in this last feature, or that it is as complete as it might be, would be remarkable, for it is a vast subject.

As far as it has been possible, however, to carry the idea into effect, it will be found tolerably correct; and whilst not intended to teach those who do know better, most of it is information of a kind which, if serving no other purpose, indicates that each generation must have been sufficiently intertwined in its local circle to have well-defined knowledge as to the genealogy as well as the social standing of those families with whom their kinsfolk were forming marriage ties.

PENDARVIS—BEDON FAMILY.

As will be noted hereafter, the compiler (though not of the blood) is the third of his name to intermarry with Pendarvis-Bedon stock; and the first in the connection upon whom has been impressed the advisability of a publication of the early records connected with those two old and honorable families.

Whilst others might have put forth a more scholarly work, and probably embellished it with narratives and sketches of the notable events and deeds in the lives of the earlier generations (for there were many such), none could have been possessed with more zeal to secure all facts obtainable towards a clear-cut genealogical record of the antecessors to the Pendarvis-Bedon marriage occurring about the year 1750; resulting in the high-minded men so full of rectitude, and the lovable women so rich in domestic virtues and piety as those with whom the compiler of this record has been associated.

Ordinarily, statements made as to genealogy are readily accepted. Should a family named Brown say that their grandfather, James Brown, married Susan, second daughter of Colonel Thomas Green, whose wife was Ann, eldest daughter of Major Eliphalet White, who was aide to General Blank during the Revolution; and that James Brown was the only son of Thomas Brown, the eldest son of Honorable Thomas Brown, who had been killed by the Indians when about to lay out the City of Salem in Kentucky, et cetera, nobody would doubt what the Browns said. Neither would anybody usually investigate what the Browns claim; in fact, very few care who were the ancestors of either the Browns or Greens, or what they did. If those of the Brown name, who are now alive, only be cultivated and pleasing folk, that is all that is comfortably needful—their descent does not matter.

In the event, however, it should matter to one of the Browns themselves who happens to be a "doubting Thomas," or to someone else who, like the compiler of this record, has a taste for exactitude in genealogy; and either event brings about the demand that every link in the chain of descent of a family, heretofore claimed and believed, be established; then, indeed, will result a task which will entertain somebody.

PENDARVIS—BEDON FAMILY.

First, the undertaking to find the needful information, such as wills, deeds, family Bibles and other similar authorities, whether private or public; next, the effort to account for each and every individual described in such documents, and finally the leaving no link in the direct chain of descent illy clinched—all this must be done.

When, and only when all this has been done will the Brown, or any other, family get something worth having—and this is what is herein tendered the descendants of the Pendarvis-Bedon marriage aforesaid.

That completeness to be desired as to the descendants of that union has not been obtained, but this is not for lack of any pains on my part; to use the language of a noted genealogist—dates, places of birth, baptism, marriage, graduation, civil or military appointment are essential to complete biography—dates are the backbone of history, and yet a repeated appeal by letter has often failed to secure such data.

While some correspondents have been prompt and others zealous in their replies; with many the reception of a letter of inquiry which necessitated the dusting of the family Bible has made them defer their answer for a more leisure hour—a season which was slow and often never to come.

The chief object, however, of this compilation has been accomplished, for it not only includes that which every legitimate descendant of John, the only son of Joseph Pendarvis, the Carolina pioneer, should know; but emphasizes that certain section of history connected with the third generation of Pendarvis which (at least one hundred years ago) should have been put in such shape “as he who runs may read.”

What is here given is simple history—plain and unvarnished, but connected—the truth of which neither pleasure or displeasure can affect.

Some of the most important items, however, hinge on intricate and curious coincidences, therefore a careful study of them by those who are at interest will be profitable.

JAMES BARNWELL HEYWARD.

"People will not look forward to posterity, who never look backward to their ancestors."

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION I.

JOSEPH PENDARVIS (No. 1), the Carolina pioneer, left no record as to date of his birth nor of his marriage, and that of his death is only to be approximated by date of the probation of his will.

As one of the "Sayle" colony, possibly joining the outfit at Barbadoes, he landed March 17, 1670, at what is now known as Port Royal, South Carolina; and whilst there has been no effort known to the author to establish the exact link connecting him with his antecessors in the Mother Country, yet we come near enough doing so for all practical purposes.

That the family from time immemorial were natives of county Cornwall, England, is clearly indicated when one recalls the old saying:

"By Ap, Tre, Con and Pen,
You know the Cornishmen."

A community called Pendarves, in the Parish of Camborne, is easily found on any old map of the county of Cornwall, and is located between Falmouth on the south and St. Ives Bay on the north.

The following items are to be gathered from the various volumes by Sir Bernard Burke:

"The family of Pendarves, of Pendarves, is of centuries standing in the parish of Camborne, yet few particulars remain of it prior to the reign of Henry VIII., when David Pendarves of Crowan, in that county, married Mary, daughter of Thomas Sperron, by Elizabeth his wife, daughter and heir of Richard Gwennow; and had with her besides three daughters (Honor, married Richard Carweighe; Blanche married Richard Merrett, and Anne married Thomas Eva), three sons:

1. John, of Constantine, in Cornwall, ancestor of Pendarves of Rochbrowe; which line ended in an heiress in 1727.
2. William, aged sixty-seven in 1620, then unmarried.
3. Thomas Pendarves, of Pendarves (Visitation of Cornwall 1620), had, besides a daughter Elizabeth, married 26th of March, 1670, John Vivian, two sons:

PENDARVIS—BEDON FAMILY.

GENERATION I.

1. Alexander, his heir.
2. Ralph, died April 10, 1625; married Anne, daughter of Thomas Eva, Esquire, of St. Just and was ancestor of Pendarves of Taskus, Bodriggy and Padstow.

The elder son, Alexander Pendarves, Esquire, of Pendarves, married Alice, daughter of John Humphrey, Esquire, of Camborne (who died in 1640), and left besides a daughter (Anne, married October 29, 1617, John Arundell, of Camborne), four sons:

1. Richard, his heir.
2. Henry, aged twenty in 1620, buried January 11, 1630.
3. Thomas.
4. John.

Alexander Pendarves died July 28, 1684, and was succeeded by his eldest son.

Richard Pendarves, Esquire, aged twenty-four in 1620, married at Camborne, April 13, 1629, Catherine, daughter of William Arundell, Esquire, of Menedarva, and had, besides two daughters (Anne, married Thomas Hicks, of Paul; and Alice, married Reginald Bawden, of Guddern), three sons (and another daughter of whom presently).

1. William, his heir.
2. Richard, of Malaga, in Spain, merchant; baptized April 22, 1633; married Elizabeth, daughter of Thomas Corbett of London; and had a son, Richard, heir of his uncle.
3. Thomas (Reverend), rector of Mawgan and St. Colum., baptized September 4, 1645; married January 7, 1688 Grace, daughter of Robert Hoblyn; and died March 16, 1703, leaving by her (who died July, 1735), a son, William (Sir), heir to his cousin, and a daughter, Grace, baptized August 11, 1696; married first, Robert Coster of Truro, and secondly, Samuel Perceval of Clifton; but d. s. p. She succeeded to the estates on death of her brother William in 1726 and devised them to her cousin, John Stackhouse.

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION I.

1. Dorcas, baptized December 7, 1643; married March 11, 1674, John Courtney, of Tregellas in Probus, and had an only daughter, Catherine, who married 1700, John Williams, of Trehane, in Probus, and had issue. Her third and only surviving daughter, Catherine, married March 31, 1738, Rev. William Stackhouse, D. D., and by him had two daughters, Mary and Catherine, and as many sons:

1. William Stackhouse, of Trehane, born 1740, married May 1, 1770, Mary Rashleigh—issue.

2. John Stackhouse, baptized March 15, 1741, married Susan, daughter and heir of Edward Acton, Esquire, of Acton Scot, county Southampton, and had issue:

1. John, died 1782, aged seven.

2. Edward William Wynne, of whom hereafter as Pendarves.

3. Thomas Pendarves; assumed surname of Acton in 1834.

1. Catherine; married 1831, Reverend William Fowler Holt.

2. Anne Gregory; married Reverend Thomas Coleman, Rector of Stretton, Salop; and had a daughter, Mary Anne, who married John Wood, Esquire, of Ashfield, county Somerset, and had issue:

1. William Cole Wood, now Pendarves, of Pendarves.

2. August Wood, now Acton, of Acton Scot.

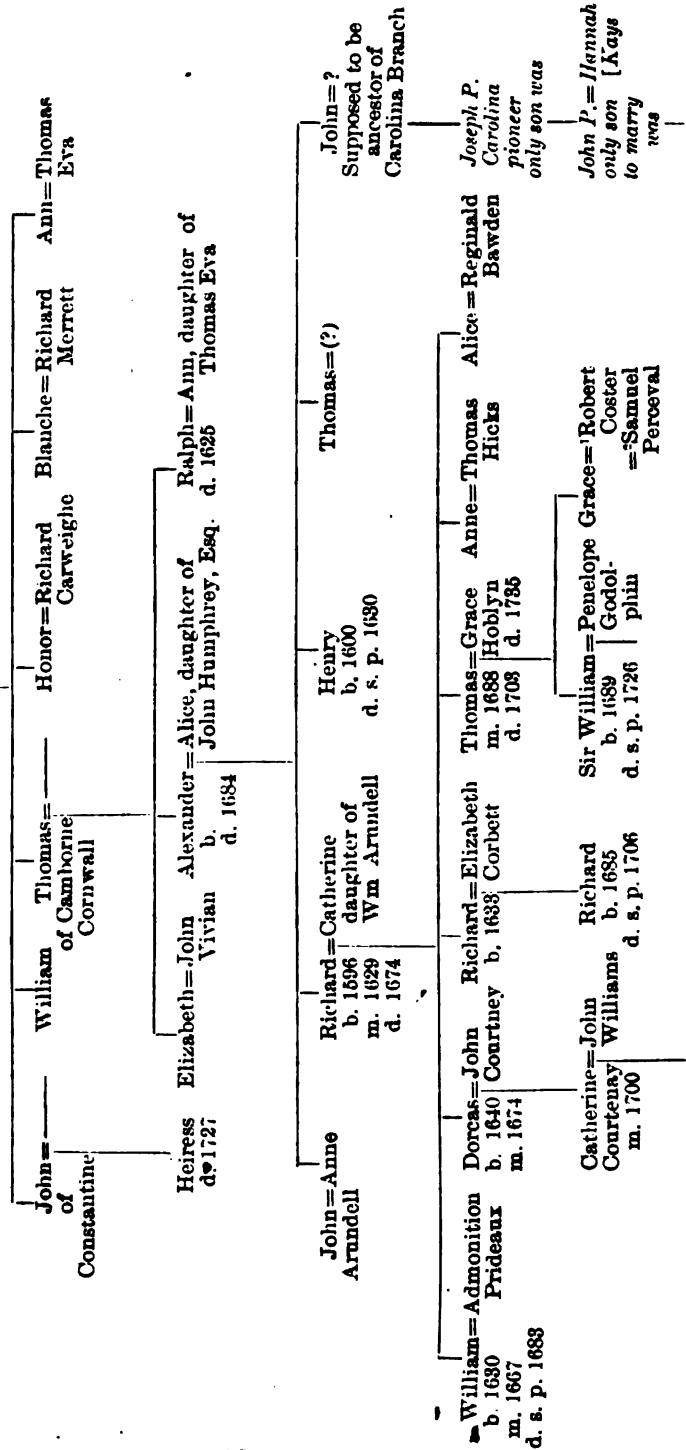

Mr. Richard Pendarves died 1674, and was succeeded by his eldest son, William Pendarves, Esquire, baptized July 4, 1630, married May 23, 1667, Admonition, daughter of Edmond Prideaux, of Padstow; but d. s. p. one, and was succeeded by his cousin-german, Sir William Pendarves, Knight, of Pendarves, knighted by Queen Anne, M. P. for St. Ives. He married Penelope, daughter of Sydney Godolphin, Esquire; but d. s. p. March 12, 1726, aged thirty-seven; was succeeded by his sister, Grace, who, as above, having no child, devised her estate to her cousin John Stackhouse, Esquire, who died at Bath, November 22, 1819, and was succeeded by his son:

Edward William Wynne (Stackhouse) Pendarves, M. P. for Cornwall; he married July 5, 1804, Tryphena, third daughter and sole surviving heir of Rev. Browse Trist, of Bowden, in Devonshire. Mr. Pendarves, whose patronymic was Stackhouse, assumed the surname of Wynne by sign-manual dated January 4, 1815, and on February 28, same year, that of Pendarves. He died June 26, 1853, and devised his estate to his great-nephew, William Cole Wood above, now Pendarves of Pendarves, living January 1, 1905."

The means by which the vowel in the final syllable of the name in Carolina became changed from e to i, can only be accounted for by the frequency of such changes in vowels of surnames always going on in America—Screven for Scriven; Heyward for Hayward; or Barnwell for Barnewall, all of whom beyond question are of one and the same respective stock.

The continuation for four centuries of the use of the identical baptismal names such as Richard, John and especially that of Alice, by the various generations of Pendarvis stock in America, is too significant for doubt that the Carolina family is of the Cornwall stock.

With the other colonists landing at Port Royal, Joseph Pendarvis soon drifted to the stronger settlement on the Ashley River, afterward Charlestown, where he became the grantee of a tract of one hundred and eighty acres of land. The deed is in the name of John, Lord Berkeley, Palatine and Lord Proprietor, dated January 1675, and is signed Joseph West, Governor.

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION I.

Our Joseph is next heard of as grantee of "Town lot No. 66 at Charlestown," dated 1682.

Next we hear of him as one of the receivers of the funds raised for an expedition from Carolina against the Spaniards at St. Augustine, under the Act of the Assembly of Carolina, October 15, 1686.

Elected member of the Colonial Assembly, January, 1693 (according to the Journal of the House), he was one of the committee in charge of the preparation of a bill which originated our method of drawing jurors; and he was also one of the committee to consider the method of drawing up a system of government and a form for the granting of land.

His associates on said committees were Colonel (afterward Governor) Robert Gibbes; Captain (afterward Governor) James Moore; Ralph Izard, and Daniel Courtis. See Rivers' History of Carolina, p. 165.

Lastly, in 1693 Joseph Pendarvis was Justice in the Commission of the Peace. See Coll. Historical Society of South Carolina, Vol. 5, p. 418.

The maiden name of the wife of Joseph Pendarvis is not known, but according to his will he left the following children:

2. John Pendarvis, b. ; d. Feb. 14, 1723.
 - m. 1st. Mary West—issue.
 - m. 2d. Hannah Kays, widow—issue.
3. Mary Pendarvis—trace lost.
4. Ann Pendarvis—trace lost.

GENERATION I.

As a part of this record is given a copy of the Coat-of-Arms issued to the English family of Pendarves of county Cornwall, England.

Whenever it is a known fact that a family of English extraction has used arms, the most authentic place for genealogical information has always been the College of Heraldry in London, because whenever the warrant for the arms in question was issued, the pedigree, based on wills, et cetera, accompanied the record of the arms; and to such record of pedigree the privilege or duty of continuation devolved on each succeeding generation. Hence, at the College of Heraldry, one is certain to be dealing with officials, not only trained to detect error, but thoroughly efficient in the discovery of probabilities.

On occasions, when lapses in the record have been long, yet possession and proof of continued use of a seal in a family, which had become colonial, application to the College of Heraldry usually brought about investigation within the College; where, without the establishment of every link, the claim to descent sometimes resulted in recognition in the form of a new warrant to use arms.

That the colonial family of Pendarvis pursued this course is doubtful, but that such was the custom is established by the possession to-day of a warrant and patent of arms issued to the colonial family of Heyward, of South Carolina, with its record of pedigree down to the date of issue, as follows:

King of Arms.

[Specially Communicated by the L. H. C.]

It is to be noted that the crest to a coat-of-arms is no more nor less than the seal of the family, and there is no authority that can deprive one of the right to use a recorded seal. A seal has ever been hereditary and really is the essence of arms.

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION I.

Beginning with the time when individual ownership of land was recognized, came into use the seal—therefore, the seal, something with which title to land could only be made valid in law, soon became a matter of record. Out of the seal grew arms, and in accord with the advance of civilization, the various coats-of-arms with their embellishments, et cetera, suitable to and in differentiation of rank, wealth, et cetera, of the family, came in vogue.

Elvin, an English authority, in his Synopsis of Heraldry, says:

"A coat-of-arms consists of the shield, crest, helmet, wreath, ornamentation and motto. The latter is not hereditary, and may be selected to suit one's fancy. By arms are meant the shield and all things on it. The latter are called bearings. Arms, therefore, include the shield and its bearings.

The arms form the most important part of a coat-of-arms, and should always be mentioned first in a description—the outline shape of the shield being unimportant and made according to one's fancy or convenience.

The crest is a figure, real or fictitious, set upon a wreath, placed above the helmet.

The wreath, upon which the crest is placed, is of silk, composed of two different tinctures (being the first metal and color mentioned in the blazon of the shield) twisted together so as to form six folds. More or less is bad heraldry. The wreath is placed between the helmet and the crest, which are fastened together by it.

The helmet or casque is a covering for the head. Helmets are used as distinctive marks of rank and are depicted accordingly—for instance, the helmet of a knight is of steel ornamented with gold; and is shown full faced, with beaver and vizor open—but the helmet of an Esquire or Gentleman, on the contrary, is a steel profile helmet ornamented with gold, with beaver and vizor both close.

The Motto is a word or saying placed on a scroll either under the shield or above the crest—and may be selected according to one's own fancy.

A complete coat-of-arms is used on a tombstone, a memorial window, or as a label to be pasted in a book. On paper and envelopes, the shield with crest and mottoes without the helmet may be used—but the crest with motto alone is most commonly used."

Administration granted with this will annexed, unto Hannah Pendarvis widow and relict of the said Testator and Joseph his son jointly, and they accordingly sworn.

TEST. WM. TUNLEY. CL. CON.

The will of John Pendarvis can not be found among the regular record of wills, but will be found along with those of administration of estates, because the second marriage of the testator after 1719 (the date of execution of said will), was followed by the birth of a son, Josiah Pendarvis, born October 16, 1722, which birth invalidated said will, and an administration was ordered by the Ordinary, December 19, 1724, as follows:

SOUTH CAROLINA.

Francis Nicholson, Esq., His Majesty's Capt. General and Gov'r. in Chief in and over his Majesty's Province of South Carolina and Ordinary for Same:

(the Executors nominated in said Will and Testament, namely Samuel West and Richard Butler having both renounced in form and refuse to take upon them or either of them ye burthen and execution of the same) the said Hannah Pendarvis and Joseph Pendarvis being first sworn on the Holy Evangelists well and faithfully to administer all and singular the goods, rights and credits of the said Decd., and to make a true and perfect Inventory thereof, and to exhibit the same unto the Secty's Office at Charlestown in order to be Recorded at or before the nineteenth day of March next ensueing, and to render a true and just account, calculation and reckoning thereof when thereunto required, I do ordain and constitute them the said Hannah Pendarvis and Joseph Pendarvis joyntly, Administrators of all and singular the goods, rights and credits of the said John Pendarvis, Decd., with his will annexed, by these Presents.

The purpose of Governor Nicholson, as Ordinary, in allowing the will of John Pendarvis to be probated at all is not clear, unless done simply to perfect the record—neither is his order annexing an invalid will to the letters of administration which he issued.

The truly egregious inaccuracy, however, is in said letters of administration, namely: the styling of Joseph Pendarvis by the Ordinary as "the only surviving son of John Pendarvis, deceased," when the fact that the existence of the younger son Josiah (born after the execution of his will by John Pendarvis), was the moving cause of said administration. Difference of opinion as to the powers conveyed by said letters of administration seem to have existed among the heirs to the estate. Joseph Pendarvis certainly did not seem to consider himself empowered to do more than collect what was due the estate and discharge its running expenses, in order that the assets could be marshalled and an accurate exhibit thereof produced in court. He evidently would not undertake to pay off legacies under the will; and his not doing so brought about in November of the following year (1725) a petition on the part of his sister Mary (Mrs. Thomas John Elliott) to the Court of Ordinary to require the administrators to pay to her the legacies she considered her due under her father's will.

The petition of Mrs. Elliott is no more lucid than are the aforesaid letters of administration, for she invoked the laws governing estates of intestates to enforce payment of legacies under an invalid will.

As will be seen later on, her petition resulted in the creation of a commission by the Court of Ordinary to "share, divide and allot the personal estate and effects of John Pendarvis, deceased, for the use of the several parties who are to share and partake of the same," and if Mrs. Elliott's claim of legacies under the will was allowed, it must have been because said legacies were about the money value of one child's share in the estate, and therefore it became agreeable to all parties thereto to recognize the intention of the testator, namely: that his daughter should have money and his sons the real estate, slaves, et cetera.

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION II.

However it might have been, the petition of Mary—Mrs. Thomas John Elliott—was a very fortuitous circumstance, since it resulted in having the entire family record established by court procedure, which record thus preserved for the historian has enabled him to procure dates and facts which otherwise would probably have been lost in obscurity.

The court document resulting from the petition reads as follows:

SOUTH CAROLINA.

By the Hon. Arthur Middleton Esq., President, Commander in Chief and Ordinary of this Province:

To the Hon. Ralph Izard Esq., Col. William Bull, Mr. Samuel West, Mr. Richard Butler and Mr. Thomas Elliott or any three of them:

Whereas Thomas John Elliott and Mary his wife (the daughter of John Pendarvis late of this Province, Planter, deceased) did by their Petition to me in Council on the 9th day of September last, set forth that the said John Pendarvis in his lifetime made a Will in writing, dated 15th day of September 1719, and thereby did give to his daughter (the Pet'r Mary) three hundred pounds to be paid her at the age of one and twenty or marriage, which shall first happen, and also the several other Specified Legacies in the said Petition sett forth—that the said John Pendarvis with't ever revoking the said Will or making any new one (died on the fourteenth day of February 1723, leaving behind him his Widow Hannah Pendarvis, three sons and the Pet'r Mary, who married the Petitioner Thomas John Elliott in his lifetime—that the said Testator having made a Disposition of the Residue of his personal estate by said Will, he (as to that) dyed Intestate; and therefore that the same ought to be Divided (according to the Statute for settling Intestate's estates of force in this Province) viz.—one-third to the said Hannah his widow, and the remaining two-thirds part amongst his five children, whereof the Pet'r Mary was one—that after the Testator's Decease, two of his sons also dyed Intestate, whereby their share of the Residue of the Personal Estate of the said Testator ought of right to be equally divided between the surviving children.

That since the said Testator's decease, the said Will has been duly proven and the two Executors, therein named, having renounced in due form; Letters of Administration, with the Will annexed, have been granted to Hannah Pendarvis, and to his son Joseph Pendarvis jointly.

That the Pet'rs had frequently applied themselves as well as for the said Legacy, as for a distribution of the said Testator's Personal Estate, but could not obtain satisfaction; the said Joseph Pendarvis having got all the negroes into his possession and worked them to his own separate use.

It was therefore prayed that proper citations should be granted against the said Hannah and Joseph Pendarvis, that they should appear before me at a time therein to be limited, to render an account of their Administration and also to pay the Petitioner's Legacy, and to make a distribution of the residue of the said Testator's Personal Estate according to Law;

Whereupon, I have caused citations to issue, and the said Joseph Pendarvis having been served therewith to appear before me on Wednesday the 10th day of November Instant—

He the said Joseph Pendarvis did on that day by his humble Petition to me set forth that he was ready to submit the accounts of his administration to be audited and settled, and that he is ready to produce them upon oath before me, or before such persons as I shall think fit to appoint. That he is very desirous that the Estate and effects of his said Father should be shared and divided according to the true Intent and meaning of his last Will and Testament. And therefore prayed that I would nominate and appoint proper persons for that purpose.

I, therefore, Reposing Special Trust and Confidence in you the said Ralph Izard, Col. Bull, Samuel West, Richard Butler and Thos. Elliott, hereby authorize and Impower you, or any three of you, to View, Appraise and Value (or if the same hath been already made) equally share, divide and allot the Personal Estate and effects of the said John Pendarvis, decd., (the accounts of the administration being first duly settled; which you are hereby Impowered to do, and to make all just allowances according to Law) for the use of the Several parties who are to share and partake of the same according to their several and respective interest therein, and to cause the same to be returned unto the Sect'y's Office of this Province under your hands, or any two of you, in order to be recorded on or before the first day of February next ensuing.

AS. MIDDLETON.

In explanation of the foregoing documents issued from the Court of Ordinary, it is well to enter at this point the record of the birth of the child of John and Hannah Pendarvis, whose existence invalidated the will of the father, John Pendarvis.

The register of the Parish of St. Philip's Church, Charleston, South Carolina, records that Josiah, son of John and Hannah Pendarvis, was born October 16, 1722.

Again the records of the Court of Ordinary for Charleston County, South Carolina, show that letters of guardianship were issued 2d of July, 1737 to Joseph Hasfort, who qualified as guardian of aforesaid minor, Josiah Pendarvis, as follows:

SOUTH CAROLINA:

By the Hon. Thos. Broughton Esq., Lieutenant Governor and Commander in Chief, in and over His Majesty's Province of South Carolina and Ordinary for the same.

To All whom these Presents shall come Greeting:

Whereas, Josiah Pendarvis, Infant, child of John Pendarvis late of this Province, deceased, hath this day made humble Application to me that Joseph Hasfort now of this Province, Planter, (who hath also desired) that he may take into his care the charge and management of the said Infant Child and his Estate, and may be appointed his Guardian:

Therefore, for the better securing his Estate, and for the more care, maintenance, and education of the said Infant Child; out of the Confidence I repose in the wisdom and integrity of him, the said Joseph Hasfort, I do hereby commit the Tuition, Guardianship, and Education of the said Infant Child to the said Joseph Hasfort according to his desire; hereby charging him that he do maintain him in meat, drink, washing, lodging, clothing and such good education as may be fitting according to the circumstances, and interest of the said Infant Child, during his minority—and that the said Joseph Hasfort do inquire into and take care and charge of his Estate, both real and personal, and do all things as a Guardian by Law may do, and render a true and faithful account thereof; and what Estate of the said Josiah Pendarvis shall come into his hands to render when he shall be hereto required by such Guardian as shall be chosen by the said Infant Child when he shall attain to the age of one and twenty years.

Given under my hand and seal this second day of July A. D. 1737, and in the Eleventh year of his Majesty's Reign.

THOS. BROUGHTON.

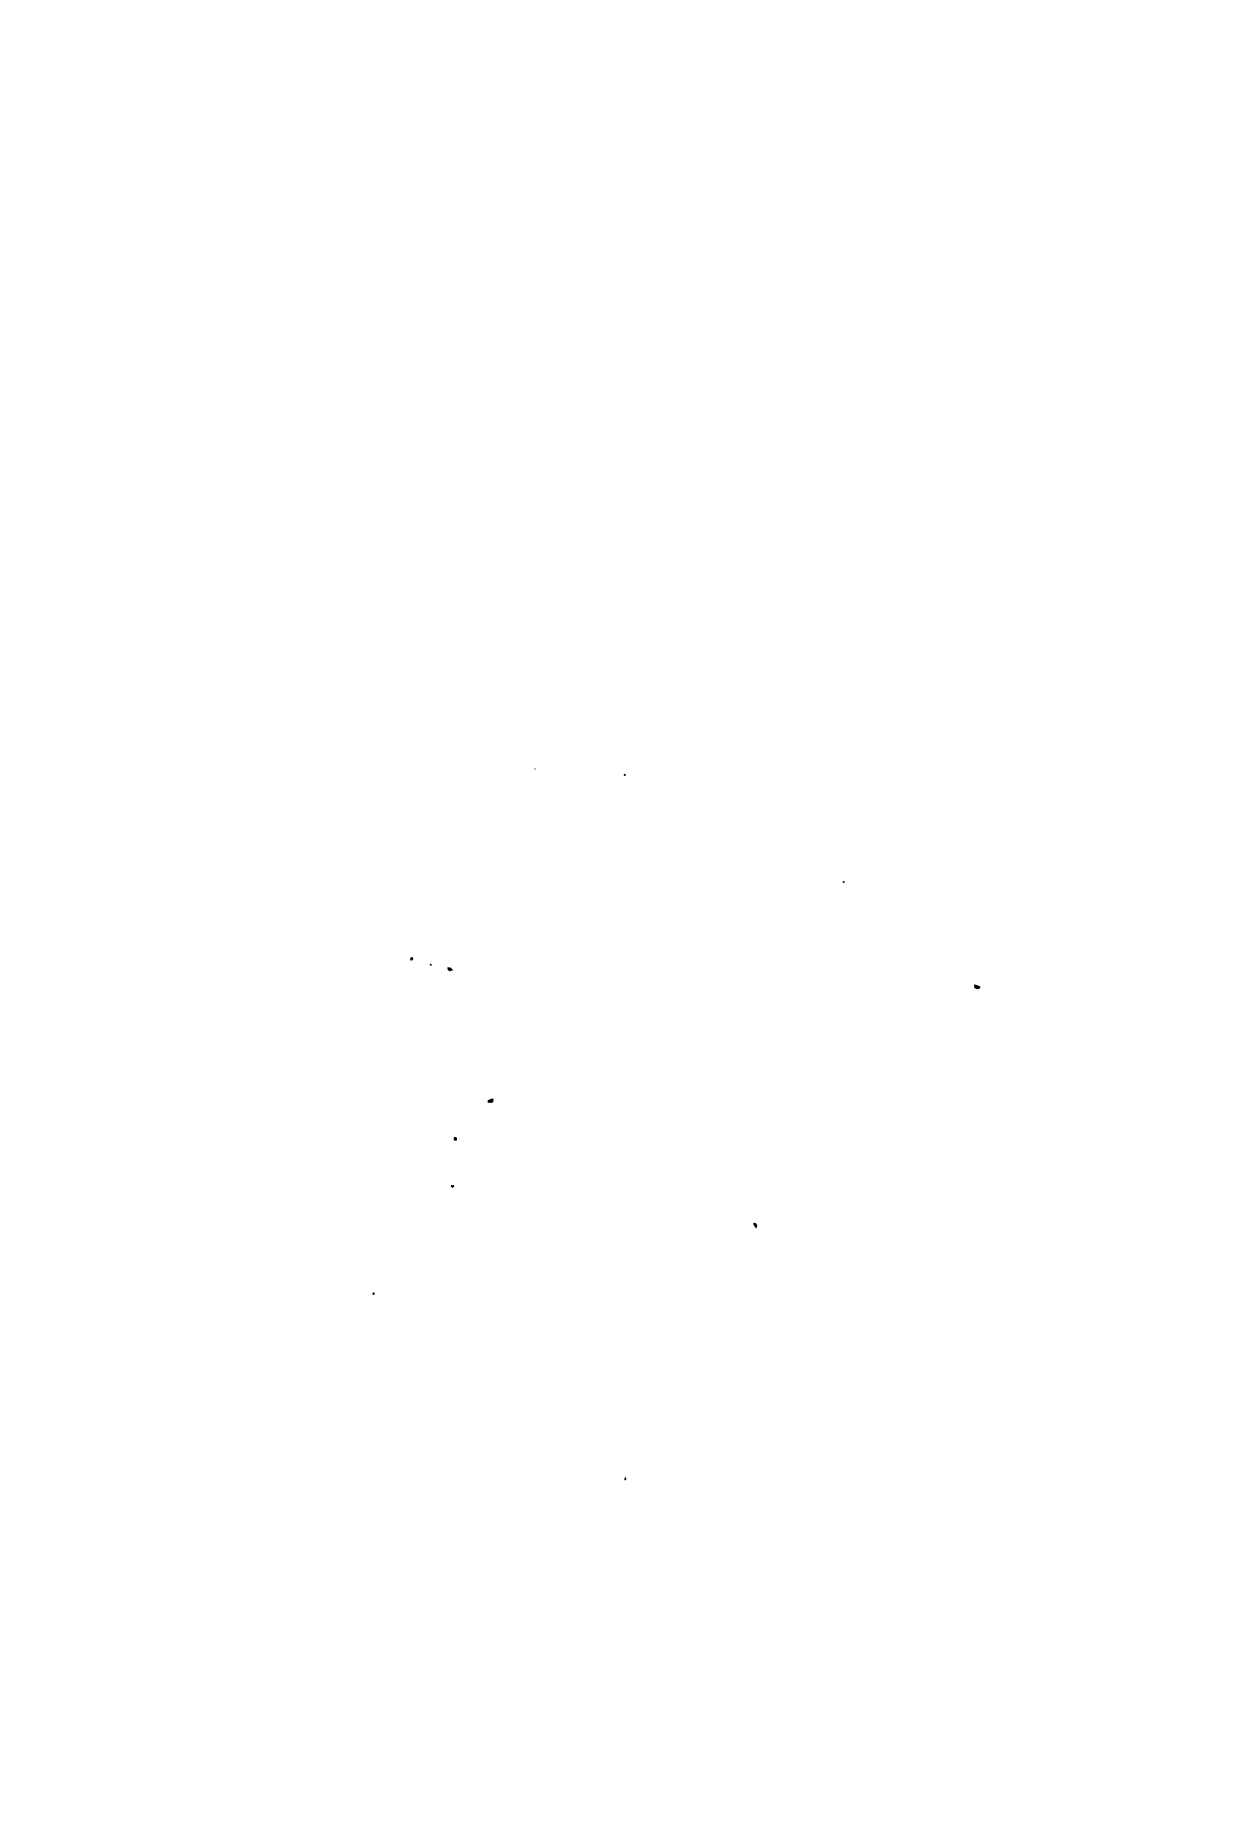

To summarize from the foregoing records, namely:

- 1st. The will of John Pendarvis, dated September 15, 1719.
- 2d. The record of the marriage of John Pendarvis and Hannah Kays, June, 1721.
- 3d. The record of the birth of Josiah Pendarvis, October 16, 1722.
- 4th. The death of John Pendarvis February 14, 1723.
- 5th. The admission to record of the will of John Pendarvis by the Ordinary, Governor Nicholson, December 19, 1724.
- 6th. The commission granted by the Ordinary Governor Middleton upon the petition of Mrs. Mary Pendarvis Elliott, dated November 12, 1725.
- 7th. The appointment of Joseph Hasfort as guardian of the said minor, Josiah Pendarvis, July 2, 1737; it will be seen
That John Pendarvis, after the execution of his will, dated September 15, 1719, married June, 1721, his second wife, Hannah Kays, widow, and had issue—a son, Josiah;
That at the death of John Pendarvis (on the 14th day of February, 1723), he left his widow, Hannah, and five (5) children—three sons, Joseph, Benjamin and John, and one daughter, Mary, by the first marriage; and one child, Josiah, born about four months before his death, by his second marriage;
That after the death of John Pendarvis and before the admission to record of his will by the Ordinary Governor Nicholson, two of his sons by the first marriage, namely: Benjamin and John died; so that Joseph became sole surviving son by the first marriage—but not the only surviving son; which explains the apparent discrepancy in the language used in Governor Nicholson's letters of administration;

That the will being invalid by reason of the second marriage of John Pendarvis, his property was divisible under the law governing intestate estates, and so went between his five (5) children; being four children by the first marriage, and the single child, Josiah, by the second marriage; making the four children and the five children respectively referred to in the petition of Mrs. Mary Pendarvis Elliott;

That upon the death of Benjamin and John, the whole brothers of Joseph and Mary, their estates would be so divided as to give double as much to Joseph and Mary as to Josiah, their half-brother by the second marriage—thus they were five (5) children to share in two-thirds of the estate of John Pendarvis (after the deduction of dower for the widow), but only the four (4) children referred to in his will were of whole blood to each other; hence it was necessary for Mary Pendarvis Elliott, as one of the whole bloods by the first marriage, to keep this fact before the commissioners, who were appointed to divide the estate.

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION III.

1—2.

5. JOSEPH PENDARVIS, eldest son of John Pendarvis and his first wife, Mary West, was born in the Province of Carolina in 1700, and probably received a good education.

He never married, but he disposed of the property he died possessed of by will, dated February 11, 1735, and that document is now to be found on record in the office of the Court of Probate, at Charleston, South Carolina.

It is to be noted that, wherever and whenever common law has been applied to the use of family names, the privilege has invariably been denied a man to confer it upon those whose use of a family name might confound them with, or tend to reflect upon, those born to the name in virtuous wedlock; and that, whether or not it was in recognition of such prohibition, Joseph Pendarvis did not defy it. Not once did he confer his family name upon those whom he made beneficiaries to his will, but he simply indicated each individual by "given name" and described their mother.

The beneficiaries, however, assumed the surname of Pendarvis, and their descendants having continuously done so, they are easily found, though widely scattered over every Southern State.

Some years later this became the efficient cause for a legislative act in favor of Josiah Pendarvis (2nd)—the only son of Josiah Pendarvis (1st), himself the only son of John Pendarvis that ever married and left issue—which act changed his name to that of his mother, namely: Bedon—so that since that act there has been no descendant of John Pendarvis who has had the lawful right to bear his surname.

The compiler has no apology to make that he considered himself as a genealogist in duty bound to investigate the lineage of each and every individual having or claiming (righteously or unrighteously) descent from Pendarvis of Carolina—which has exhaustively been done.

PENDARVIS—BEDON FAMILY.

GENERATION III.

7. MARY PENDARVIS, only daughter of John Pendarvis and Mary West was born, date not found.

She was the individual whose petition to the Court of Ordinary, asking that the administrators of the estate of her father, John Pendarvis, be required to pay unto her the legacies she considered to be due her by the will of her father, which petition was so worded as to explain the full pedigree of the family left by John Pendarvis.

She married June 30, 1723, Thomas John Elliott, son of John Elliott (one of the four pioneer brothers of the name) and his wife, Ann Burnham.

They had children as follows:

10. Amarinthia Elliott, b.

9. JOSIAH PENDARVIS, only son of John Pendarvis and his second wife, Hannah, was born October 16, 1722, in Charleston, South Carolina, and baptized in St. Philip's Church, March 31, 1725.

Very few records are to be found relating to Josiah Pendarvis. He was the infant whose existence invalidated the will of his father, John Pendarvis, and he probably grew up and was educated in Charleston, South Carolina. His half-brothers, Benjamin and John Pendarvis, having died unmarried, and his half-brother Joseph having also died without lawful issue; when the line of his sister Mary (Mrs. Thomas John Elliott) became extinct, Josiah Pendarvis and his issue became the only legitimate representatives of the name in South Carolina.

During his early life, the state of feeling between his mother, Hannah, and her step-son, Joseph Pendarvis, was probably kind; and as they were joint administrators of the estate of John Pendarvis, no other guardianship seemed necessary for the minor Josiah Pendarvis as long as Joseph, his elder brother, lived.

In July 1737, however, letters of guardianship for the minor Josiah Pendarvis were issued to Joseph Hasfort, who seems to have been his stepfather from his early childhood.

When Josiah Pendarvis attained manhood and realized the kind of life his elder half-brother had led and the disposition which he had made of the property which their father, John Pendarvis, had only intended legitimate descendants to enjoy, he (Josiah Pendarvis) gathered up his belongings and changed his home, moving over one hundred miles westward from the locality where his parents and grandparents had lived, establishing a new home in that part of Granville County, then known as Indian land, now Beaufort County, South Carolina, where he reinvested his inheritance and lived unto his death.

Josiah Pendarvis married before his union with Mary Bedon. That he had by that earlier marriage one son called Richard is established by his deed of gift (see presently) of the slaves, cattle, et cetera, dated St. Helena Parish, Granville County, February 25, 1767.

PENDARVIS.

GENERATION III.

1—2.

He did not give this son Richard the land on which said Richard lived, but retaining the title, he leased it to him, yet he gave him the personalty in fee simple. This was sometimes done by parents who wished to retain the right to sell the land when in their judgment occasion offered to obtain better property.

There is no record in Charleston, South Carolina, of any will made by Josiah Pendarvis (No. 9), and the public records of Beaufort County (where his will was probably probated) were burned during the War of Secession; therefore, it can not be learned what estate he left; but for genealogical purposes we have the will of Colonel Richard Bedon, dated December 19, 1765 (see presently), which clearly establishes those children of said Josiah Pendarvis (No. 9), who were born to his wife, Mary Bedon, only child of said Colonel Bedon, who made his son-in-law, said Josiah Pendarvis, Senior (No. 9), one of the executors of said will.

All the associations of Josiah Pendarvis were in Beaufort County, South Carolina. All of his property was there and all of his children married there.

Josiah Pendarvis (No. 9), married first — wife unknown.

They had one son as follows:

12. Richard Pendarvis, b. cir. 1745; d. s. p. April 13th, 1781.

Josiah Pendarvis married secondly, Mary Bedon, only child of Colonel Richard Bedon of Berkeley County, only son of Major Richard Bedon of Colleton County, who was the second son of the pioneer, Honorable George Beadon of Charlestown, all of South Carolina.

Josiah Pendarvis and Mary Bedon had children as follows:

14. Elizabeth Pendarvis, b. May 23, 1755; d. April 5, 1804.

m. 1st. Josiah Bryan—issue.

m. 2d. Lieut. John Screven—issue.

FAMILY OF BEDON.

Before proceeding further with these records, inasmuch as all who follow—except Richard Pendarvis (No. 13), who left no issue—will descend from Bedon, all that has been learned of that family, including the wills of the direct lineal ancestors, will now be inserted.

According to Sir Bernard Burke, the family of Beadon, variously spelled Beaudin, Beaudyn or Beadyn, was of considerable importance at a very early period and enjoyed extensive property in Devonshire; in particular the Manor of Egge, Buckland and Compton, in the hundred of Roborough. This estate was held by them until conveyed in marriage to Roger Whithaigh, of Elford, by Margaret, daughter and heir of Sir Robert de Beadyn, once high sheriff of Devon, temp. Edward I. and twice during the reign of Edward II.

Langridge in the Parish of Brushford, county Somerset, on the border of Devon; Pinkworthy, county Devon, together with the estates at Morebath and Upcott, have for a very long period been possessed by the family. Sir William Pole in his Devon, states "that Upcott was, in the 27 King Henry III. the land of Gervais de Upcott, and in King Henry VI. time, Nicholas Radford had his dwelling there; after whose death a controversy arose between John Radford, of Oakford and Thomasine, sister of the said Nicholas, Roger Proux, her husband, and Nicholas Proux, their son, on the one part, and John Radford on the other, unto whom the said Thomasine, Roger and Nicholas released their right." This estate is still in the family of Beadon.

If the learned Pole had lived to complete his work, he would no doubt have thrown much light on the early history of the Beadon family. It seems from tradition that the house at Langridge was built by David Beadon about 1600, and afterwards it became the property of Robert Beadon, who married Mary Squier.*

*Through the marriage with the Squier family the Beadons became related to the families of Whalley, Rogers and Troyford.

BEDON.

ENGLAND.

Robert Beadon, living at Pinkworthy about 1645, married Agnes Spurway of the ancient family of Spurway of Spurway (a pedigree of which may be found in the Visitations of Devon), and had by her (besides a daughter, who married — Pincombe, Esquire, of Oakford, county Devon), five sons:

1. George (note American pioneer).
2. Richard, of whom we treat.
3. David died unmarried.
4. John, married Mary, daughter of John Radford, Esquire, of Oakford and had issue:
 1. Robert.
 2. John.
 3. Agnes, married Gooding, Esquire, of Hele.
 4. Christian, died unmarried.
5. Edward, died unmarried at Langridge, will dated 1695.

The second son, Richard Beadon, Esquire, married Joan, daughter and co-heir of John Radford, Esquire, of Oakford (derived through marriage), living in 1620, with Dorothy, daughter of John Beare, of Beare, from Richard Radford, Esquire, of Oakford, with whom the entry in the Visitation of Devon commences. By this lady Mr. Beadon had issue:

1. Robert, of whom presently.
2. Edward, in holy orders, rector of Clayhanger, county Devon. He married Sarah Squier and left a daughter, Frances, who married Reverend Thomas Martin.
3. John, died unmarried.
4. Sarah, died unmarried.
5. Richard, died unmarried.

The term "Visitation" expresses that system of investigation which has been for centuries continuously carried on by the officials from the College of Heraldry in London whereby the College kept itself informed as to those using armorial bearings. Fines and other penalties being inflicted upon those found using such emblems without warrant.

CAROLINA FAMILY.

Our pioneer reached South Carolina as one of the Sayle Colony from England in 1670, which was much earlier than when the French Huguenot refugees began settling South Carolina; and as no effort known to the writer has been made to connect the link of descent across the seas our record begins with the pioneer, who spelled his name George Beadon.

He was among the earliest settlers of Oyster Point, now Charleston, South Carolina; where he was grantee of town lots No. 20 and No. 40 in 1672; and according to Owen's Parliamentary Returns, George Beadon was a member of the first Colonial Assembly of 1670-71.

It has been by some believed that the earlier generations of Bedon were Excise Officials of the Crown and therefore were Loyalists or Tories during the Revolution. However true the first might be, the last supposition as to their being Tories can not be true, as there was but one of the name alive who could about that time have been an official of the Crown, namely, John Raven Bedon, a grandson of the pioneer, and we find among the archives of the State of South Carolina the following commission to the said John Raven Bedon:

State of South Carolina:

By the Hon. Thos. Bee, Esq., Lieut. Governor and Commander in Chief of the said State in the absence of the Governor from the seat of Government.

To all whom these Presents shall come, be seen or made known,
Greeting:

Know ye, that I, reposing special Trust and Confidence in the Fidelity, Care, Prudence and Integrity of John Raven Bedon, Esq., Do, by these Presents, commission, constitute and appoint him to transact, negotiate and manage in behalf of the state of South Carolina a cartel for exchange of Prisoners of War with His Excellency the Governor or Commander in Chief of the Island of New Providence.

BEDON.

GENERATION I.

And for that purpose to take command of and forthwith proceed in the Sloop Raven with a Flag of Truce for New Providence with such Prisoners of War, subjects of the King of Great Britain as are named and particularly mentioned in a list of cartel herewith delivered to the said John Raven Bedon; and to return from the said Island of New Providence as soon as may be with such Prisoners of War subjects of the United States of America or States in Alliance with them as the said John Raven Bedon shall receive from the Governor or Commander in Chief of the said Island.

Hereby giving and granting to the said John Raven Bedon full power and authority in the premises to do, transact, negotiate and perform all such matters and things as shall be necessary and expedient touching this service; observing such orders and directions as he shall receive from me or the Commander in Chief of the state of South Carolina for the time being.

WILLIAM NISBETT, Dep't. Secretary.

Given under my hand and seal of the said State the 13th day of April, One Thousand, Seven Hundred and seventy-nine.

THO'S. BEE.

An entire family of the Bedon name, living in Charlestown in 1752, were drowned during the hurricane of September 15, of that year, but after various efforts to do so, the family has not been identified.

A graphic account of the occurrence is given by Ramsay in his history of South Carolina, as follows:

"A brick house where Mr. Bedon lived in Church street, a few doors from General Washington's was with the outhouses reduced to a heap of rubbish. Mr. Bedon and family unfortunately remained too long in the house, for the whole family consisting of twelve souls perished in the water, except himself and a negro wench. He was driven to the upper end of Broad street, and was taken into the window of the house of Mr. Hext, who lived at the corner of Broad and Mazyck streets, where Mr. Huger now lives. The negro wench was driven up Cumming's Point and saved herself by clinging to a tree. The bodies of Mrs. Bedon and one of the children and of a Dutch boy were found in the Parsonage pasture in St. Phillip's street."

PENDARVIS—BEDON FAMILY.

GENERATION I.

One of the smaller streets in the oldest part of the city of Charleston, connecting Elliott and Tradd streets, is still called Beadon Alley, and probably locates the back of the lot of Henry Bedon, who was the youngest son of the pioneer.

The one other place where the name of Bedon is to be found in America, is at Portsmouth, Virginia, and those people (some of whom the writer has met and conversed with) resemble the Carolina family, but they did not know where their ancestors came from.

As far as can be learned the male line of Bedon in Carolina became extinct upon the death of John Raven Bedon; and whilst there are without doubt many who are descended from the female lines of Bedon; notably that of Elizabeth, youngest daughter of the pioneer, whose first husband was John Raven, of Colleton County—as stated elsewhere—there will be no effort made in this work to record any but the direct lines descending from Mary Bedon, who married Josiah Pendarvis.

Will of George Beadon, Pioneer.

In the name of God, Amen,

I, George Beadon of Charles Town in Berkley County, in the Province of Carolina, being of sound mind and memory, thanks be to God for it, do make and ordain this my last Will and Testament, in manner and form following, that is to say:

WILL OF MAJOR RICHARD BEDON (2ND. GEN.)

SOUTH CAROLINA;

In the name of God, Amen; the third day of October, Anno Domini, One Thousand Seven Hundred and thirty eight; I, Richard Bedon of Colleton, being sick and weak, but of sound mind and memory (all praise be given to God) Do make this my last Will and Testament in manner and form following, that is to say:

First and principally I commend my Soul into the hands of Almighty God, my Merciful Creator, and to Jesus Christ my only loving Saviour and Redeemer, by whose merits I hope for life Everlasting—my body I commit to the earth to be decently buried at the direction of my Executors hereafter named, in sure and certain hope of a joyfull Resurrection at the last day.

My worldly goods which it has pleased God to bless me with I order and dispose of, in manner and form following, viz; First it is my expressed Will and Desire that all my just Debts and Funeral Expenses be duly paid and satisfied as soon as possible.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my loving daughter Mary Hewett one Negro Girl named Lucy, and a riding Horse named Frolick, to her and the heirs of her body forever; and not to be disposed of by her husband by any manner of ways or means whatsoever.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my loving daughter Ann Barnett one Negro Girl named Rose, and a Bed and furniture to her and her heirs forever; and it is my Will that my Son-in-law George Barnett have the use of Thirty Acres of Land during Six years—to be allotted to him out of the tract I now live on, (he paying a Yearly acknowledgement of twenty shillings to my loving wife for the same) where my Executors shall think most proper.

Item, I give and bequeath unto my loving Son Richard Bedon, my Sword and Cane, a Stone Ring and a pair of Silver shoe-Buckles to him and his heirs forever.

Item, it is my express Will and desire and I hereby give full power in ordering my Executors to sell and dispose of a tract of land at Pon Pon River containing Eighteen Hundred Acres, and to ratify, make and confirm good and sufficient Title or Titles thereunto to such person or persons that shall purchase the same.

Item, Whereas I have already given unto my other children a sufficient part of my Estate, therefore I now give and bequeath unto my loving wife Elizabeth Bedon all the rest and residue of my personal Estate and the free use and improvement of my home and all the lands belonging to it, not already disposed of, during her natural life—and after her decease, then I give and bequeath the said house and lands of my loving Son Richard Bedon and to his heirs forever.

BEDON.

GENERATION II.

Lastly, I do make and ordain my loving wife Elizabeth Bedon Executrix, and my loving Son Richard Bedon, and my Son-in-law John Norman, Executors of this my last Will and Testament, and I do utterly revoke and annul all former Wills by me heretofore made.

In Witness Whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and seal this the day and year above mentioned.

The South Carolina Gazette of November 8, 1751, states that the Representatives elected on October 22 past, from St. Paul's Parish to the General Assembly were George Saxby, Esq., Major Richard Bedon and Captain Thos. Law Elliott.

In the signature to his will Major Richard Bedon dropped the vowel "a," that appears in the signature by his father. He and his wife were prominent members of the Baptist Church in St. Andrew's Parish, an off-shoot of the First Baptist Church at Charlestown, South Carolina.

The house and lands devised above by Major Richard Bedon to his wife, and then to his son Richard, are the lands owned and occupied to-day A. D., 1905, by Richard Bedon, seventh generation in descent, and fifth son of Colonel Richard Stobo Bedon, the only son of Captain Richard Bedon (baptized Bedon Pendarvis), eldest son of Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, who changed his name and that of his children, December 18, 1802, to that of Bedon.

WILL OF COLONEL RICHARD BEDON (3RD GEN.)

SOUTH CAROLINA:

In the name of God, Amen;

I, Richard Bedon, of Berkley County in the Province of South Carolina, Planter, being weak of Body, but of sound mind, memory and understanding, do make, publish and declare this to be my last Will and Testament; my Soul, I Recommend into the hands of Almighty God who gave it, hoping for the Remission of all my Sins through the merits of my only Saviour Jesus Christ; and my Body I commit to the earth to be decently entered at the discretion of my Executors herein after named.

Item, it is my Will that all my just and lawful debts be paid and satisfied by my executors hereafter named.

Item, I give unto my beloved Wife Martha Bedon, all that Plantation and Tract of land on the North side of Ashley river, to her and her heirs forever. I likewise give the use and labour unto her of four Negroes such as she may think proper to chuse, and at her decease to be returned to my Estate, and be equally divided among my Grandchildren.

Item, I give unto my beloved Wife the use of all my household furniture, and at her decease to be equally divided between my Granddaughter Elizabeth Pendarvis and my Grandson Josiah Pendarvis, and their heirs forever.

Item, I give unto my Grandson Josiah Pendarvis all that Plantation or Tract of land more or less at the "Horseshoe" when he arrives at the age of twenty-one years.

Item, It is my Will that my Tract or Tracts of land "Beach Hill" be equally divided in two Tracts.

Item, I give unto my daughter Mary Pendarvis during her natural life all that Tract of land whereupon my Buildings are fix't at "Beach Hill," and at her decease to the child she is now pregnant with, and its heirs forever—and the other part of my Tract at "Beach Hill" to my Granddaughter Elizabeth Pendarvis, when she arrives at the age of eighteen years or at the day of her marriage, to her and her heirs forever.

Item, I give and bequeath unto the Anti-Paedo Baptist Meeting House in St. Andrew's Parish of which I was a member the sum of One hundred pound to be paid Yearly into the hands of the Minister for ten years.

BEDON.

GENERATION III.

Item, It is my Will that my personal Estate be equally divided in four parts—One fourth part I give the use, labor and produce of to my daughter Mary Pendarvis, all the days of her Natural Life, and at her decease to be returned to my Estate and to be equally divided among my Grandchildren then living—One fourth part I give unto my Granddaughter Elizabeth Pendarvis when she arrives to the age of Eighteen years, or the day of marriage, to her and her heirs forever—One fourth part I give unto my Grandson Josiah Pendarvis when he arrives to the age of Twenty-one years, and his heirs forever—and One fourth part I give unto the Child that my daughter is now pregnant with, and if it is a girl at the age of Eighteen years, to her and her heirs forever, and if it is a boy, at the age of Twenty-one years to him and his heirs forever.

Item, It is my Will that if any of the Grandchildren should die before they come of age, then the Estate shall be divided among the surviving Grandchildren then being.

Item, It is my Will that my two Tracts of land in St. Bartholomew's Parish containing Seven hundred and twenty-five acres more or less be sold, and the monies arising therefrom be equally divided among my Grandchildren when they arrive of age; and it is my Will that my Grandchildren be educated out of my Estate—It is my Will that Josiah Pendarvis Sen'r, William Fuller and Benjamin Fuller to be Executors to this my last Will and Testament.

BEDON.

GENERATION III.

As aforesaid, the will of Colonel Richard Bedon of December 19, 1765, closely links the genealogical chain of descent down to and through the fourth generation of Pendarvis, and the fifth generation of Bedon.

When one considers the loss of the record of the will of Josiah Pendarvis, Senior (No. 9), who had married Mary Bedon, great good fortune occurs in the existence of the record of the will of Colonel Richard Bedon; as it clearly links the third and fourth generations of Pendarvis, the one being his son-in-law and the other his grandson.

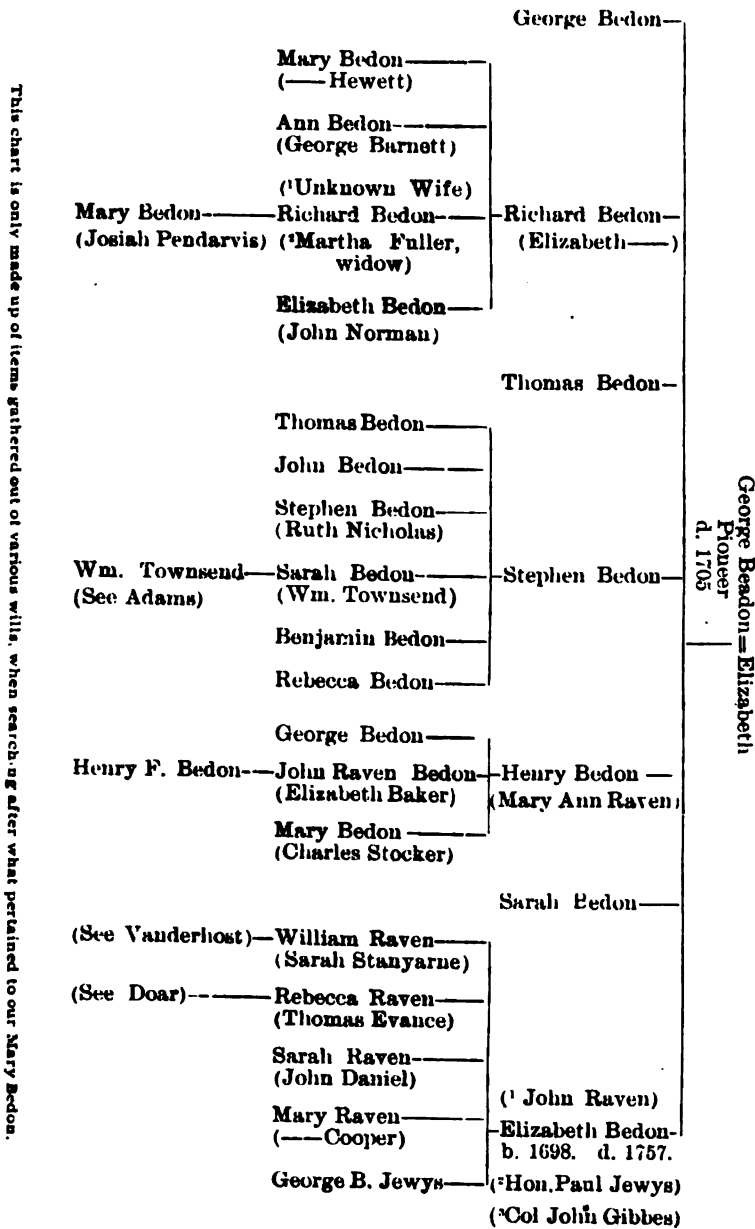

From this point, extant family Bibles, beginning with Elizabeth Pendarvis and her only brother Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, grandchildren of Colonel Richard Bedon, take our record connectedly to date of publication.

Nothing in the life or records of Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, or Elizabeth Pendarvis (afterwards Mrs. Screven), grandchildren of Colonel Richard Bedon goes to witness that the unborn child alluded to by Colonel Bedon in his will, ever reached maturity.

In Witness Whereof, the said Josiah Pendarvis hath hereunto set his name and seal the day and year just above written.

Signed, sealed and delivered by the same above named Josiah Pendarvis.
JOSIAH PENDARVIS, SENR. (L.S.)

Richard Pendarvis, commonly called "Tory Dick," was a South Carolina Loyalist, and

"He left a name at which the world grew pale,
To point a moral or adorn a tale."

He lived on May River, in St. Helena Parish, Granville (now Beaufort) County, South Carolina, and was a notorious participant in many vindictive and bloody encounters between the Tory and Revolutionary elements of his neighborhood.

Many messages of defiance passed between him and Captain James Doharty, an energetic leader of the Revolutionists, resulting in a notice from Pendarvis that he and his friends would call on Doharty on a certain night.

Upon learning this, Doharty and his party determined to ambush Pendarvis and his men on their way, and they were in the act of leaving his house to do so, when Pendarvis hailed his arrival: "Are you Captain Doharty?" Doharty, turning to his companions, warned them as follows: "Fly, we are too late." Then he bravely remained in his front yard and replied, "Yes." Upon this, he was fired upon by the Pendarvis party and killed.

With the notice he had, why Doharty had not collected sufficient force to have openly repelled the attack is strange, and his effort to ambush Pendarvis justified the deed of the latter.

This occurred in March, 1779. Later on, when the cause of the Revolutionists had become assured, many of the aggressive Tory element began to seek refuge in flight, and "Tory Dick" who had concluded to do the same, was getting ready to leave; but the friends and kinsmen of Doharty did not mean to let him get away; and surely in April, 1781, they succeeded in killing him.

The account of this rencontre given in the Georgia Gazette, April 19, 1781, reads as follows:

"Last Friday, April 13th, Captain Richard Pendarvis was shot dead within twenty yards of his house on May River, where one William Patterson was also barbarously murdered. The perpetrators of the murder consisted of a Rebel officer and five men; the names of four of the men were Leacraft (prisoner on parole), Blackwood, Bettison, and Nathan Gamble, who had received and was under protection.

"The villains afterward went to the house and insulted Mrs. Pendarvis with opprobrious language, and on leaving took with them three horses and Captain Pendarvis's gun."

Colonel John Screven, great-grandson of Elizabeth Pendarvis, in writing of Richard Pendarvis (who was elder half-brother of said Elizabeth), remarked:

"I think, however, it likely that gross injustice has been done his memory. If he was a Tory and if he did shoot down a man (the uncle of Leacraft) who had repeatedly threatened his life, he died like a brave man.

"He was unarmed when the Leacrafts pursued him, and finding that he could not escape, he turned upon them baring his breast and bid them 'shoot and be damned.' Upon which John Leacraft, a nephew of Doharty fired, killing Pendarvis. I have heard Doctor Richard Bedon Screven defend him warmly."

No issue of Tory Dick has ever been traced although the Georgia Gazette states that he left a widow.

His property, that is the land, passed to his sister Elizabeth, whose family burial ground is on the plantation where Richard Pendarvis lived.

14. ELIZABETH PENDARVIS was born May 23, 1755, and died April 5, 1804.

She first married August 14, 1770, Josiah Bryan, who was born August 22, 1746, at Walnut Hill, Pocotaligo River, Beaufort County, South Carolina, and died in 1774.

Their married life was spent on Wilmington Island, just below the City of Savannah, Georgia; and his will, dated November 8, 1784, was probated December 23, 1774, and recites his home as being of Christ Church Parish, in the Province of Georgia.

He was son and sixth child of Jonathan Bryan and Mary, daughter of John Williamson and Mary, daughter of William Bower, and Martha, daughter of Hugh Hext, a Welsh pioneer to Carolina in 1685.

Jonathan Bryan (born September 12, 1708; died March, 1788), was son and fourth child of the pioneer, Joseph Bryan, of St. Paul's Parish, South Carolina, and his wife, Janet Cochran.

Joseph Bryan and his whole family, some of them grown sons are found later settled on the Pocotaligo river in Prince William's Parish, Granville County, where Jonathan Bryan lived until he moved to Georgia. On the Pocotaligo river Jonathan Bryan was on the frontier of civilization and near enough to the State line to be among those Carolinians, who in February, 1740 extended their aid to General Oglethorpe of Georgia, in his expedition against the Spaniards at St. Augustine, Fla. It was the aid thus extended the struggling colony in Georgia, by the Carolinians of the generation of Jonathan Bryan, that has been memorialized by the names of some of the streets in Savannah, viz.: Abercorn, Broughton, Bryan, Bull, Drayton, St. Julien, Whitaker, and others.

In the London "record office," the South Carolina manuscripts show in the muster roll of troops under Captain Hunt, May 1, 1728, the name of Jonathan Bryan, Ensign for a campaign in South Carolina against the Yemassee Indians.

During that period of their lives spent by the sons of Joseph Bryan in Granville County, South Carolina, then called "The Indian Land," all of them left earnest record of the piety which has ever since characterized the stock. The organization of "The Stoney Creek Independent Presbyterian Church" near Pocotaligo, began May 20, 1743, with Hugh Bryan, Jonathan Bryan, Stephen Bull, Junior, (husband of Elizabeth Bryan) and others extending a call to Mr. William Hutson to be their pastor.

On the 8th of June of the same year, a day was set apart for fasting and prayer "to settle matters about and to organize the church." Just here one can but note the change in religious faith in succeeding generations of the family, due probably as noted elsewhere in this work to maternal influences.

Whilst the Bryan family living in 1900 are mostly all staunch adherents to Episcopacy—their ancestor, Jonathan Bryan, was one of those who drew up the Confession of Faith adopted by "The Stoney Creek Independent Presbyterian Church" which declares that "a true church is not national or parochial—that no one church hath any priority or superintendancy above or over another, and that every church ought to be organical; that an elder or elders, a deacon or deacons ought to be elected in every congregation according to those holy qualifications laid down in the Word of God, and that the said elders and deacons so chosen ought solemnly to be ordained with prayer and laying on of the hand of the eldership; that such church as have not officers so ordained are disorderly—there being something yet wanting."

Later on (1752) Jonathan Bryan removed permanently to Georgia where he became prominent in public affairs. Though a member of the Royal Council, he did not hesitate to become President of the first public gathering of the citizens in Georgia, at which resolutions were passed expressing their grievances in consequence of various acts of the British parliament: for which sedition a motion for his expulsion from office was offered—to result in his suspension by order of the king, December 9, 1769.

The Union Society, controlling Bethesda Home, composed of representative men of the community recognizing the patriotic course of Jonathan Bryan and the personal sacrifice he was offering to the public cause, presented him with a silver vase, now in the possession of Mr. Joseph Bryan, No. 103, whose home is Richmond, Virginia. This vase bears this inscription:

To
Jonathan Bryan, Esquire,
Who for publicly appearing in favor of the rights and liberties of the people, was excluded from His Majesty's Council of this province, this piece of plate is presented by the Union Society in Georgia.
(obverse) "Ita cuique eveniat de republica meruit."

As a family that of Bryan have been supposed to be from Hereford, England, though no positive information relating thereto is of record. This supposition was sustained from the fact that there is an old seat in Hereford county called "Brampton Bryan," in the neighborhood of which is "Dean Forest," which names were the ones used by Jonathan Bryan in Georgia. He called his home on Savannah River "Brampton Bryan," and another grant he called "Dean Forest."

More recent investigations, however, lead to the belief that the family may have come from Northamptonshire. The village of Brampton is found in that county, and the tomb of Elizabeth, daughter of "Joseph Bryan," with the Bryan arms is in Stoke Bruere Church, Northamptonshire to-day.

It is a matter of surprise that the settlers in this country, who appeared from the first to have been men of position and importance paid so little attention to keeping up their connection with their own families in England.

Elizabeth Pendarvis and Josiah Bryan had one son:

16. Joseph Bryan, b. Aug. 18, 1773; d. Sept. 5, 1812.

Elizabeth Pendarvis (No. 14) married secondly, January 11, 1776, Lieutenant John Screven, who was born November 23, 1750, and died September 2, 1801.

He was third son of James Screven and Mary Hyrne Smith, daughter of Thomas Smith, 2d Landgrave of Carolina and his second wife, Mary Hyrne, daughter of Edward Hyrne, from the county of Norfolk, England, and his wife Elizabeth Massingbird. (A Bible record of the Girardeau family.)

The links between James Screven above, who was born about 1704 and Reverend William Screven, the pioneer Baptist clergyman in Carolina, are not clear. Reverend William Screven is recorded to have been born about 1629 in England, emigrating from Summerton in 1681 to Kittery, Maine; where he married Bridget Cutt and resided until 1684.

He and his Ana-Baptist co-religionists were so persecuted by the authorities of the Province of Maine in the repression of their tenet against infant baptism that it caused a covenant to be entered into and a company organized September 25, 1682, for migration South, where most of their descendants still live.

John Screven was lieutenant of the St. John's Rangers and served with the command of his elder brother, General James Screven, who was killed at Medway, Georgia.

The family Bible of Elizabeth Pendarvis (Mrs. Screven) is still in good preservation and in the custody of the descendants of her daughter Elizabeth (No. 24), Mrs. John B. Posey, who lived up to 1904 at Yazoo City, Miss.

The record including both of her marriages is supposed to be in her own handwriting up to the death of her husband, Lieut. Screven, whose remains the record states was taken to the family cemetery on May River, South Carolina.

The tombstone of Elizabeth Pendarvis is also there at the spot called "Montpelier."

15. JOSIAH PENDARVIS, Junior, (afterward Josiah Bedon), only son of Josiah Pendarvis and Mary Bedon, was born in 1757, in Beaufort County, South Carolina, and died leaving will dated January 24, 1820.

He spent the earlier part of his life in Beaufort County, where all of his inheritance from his father was invested. Besides a valuable plantation on the main called "Woodstock," he owned "Cat Island," just down the river from Beaufort, about which many years later a lawsuit occurred as to the construction of his will "should my son Stobo Bedon die leaving no issue," resulting, as will be explained, in a legal technicality allowing others than his descendants to enjoy that part of his estate. He was also heir through his maternal grandfather, Colonel Richard Bedon, of the Bedon homestead at "Horseshoe," in Colleton County, South Carolina.

Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, grew up during a period when considerable attention was being devoted to education in South Carolina, and he was the schoolmate of many of those whose oratory and political writings fanned the revolutionary spark into the flame which resulted in the independence of the American Colonies. He, therefore, was well educated, and after his graduation, his father being a man of considerable means for his day, Josiah Pendarvis enjoyed what was then considered the usual finishing educational touch, namely: a visit to Europe, and tradition says that during this trip he located the old home of the Beadon family.

He left a select and costly library, within which to-day many a book will be found in which he wrote notes when reading Dante or some other choice classic in the language of the author. His autograph, given with the copy of his oil portrait, is taken from one of these books, and is dated 1774, several years prior to his marriage.

The autograph of his wife, Elizabeth Louisa Stobo, also given with her portrait, is taken from one of her own books which was a collection of the best light literature of the day.

The political inclinations of Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, were probably loyalist, but they do not seem to have been at all aggressive; certainly not enough so to sever kindly association with the respective husbands (Bryan and Screven) of his sister Elizabeth, nor with his friend and nearest neighbor, Captain Barnard Elliott, of Horseshoe Creek, all of whom were ardent revolutionists; and he seemed to have been enough of a domestic character to find time to marry in the very midst of hostilities.

His religious associations were in the town of Beaufort, where he was a prominent member of the Baptist church—the minutes of that organization August 14, 1847 styling him “the late Deacon Josiah Bedon.” He gave to that religious body a tract of eighty acres of land as an endowment for a Baptist Mission near his “Horseshoe” plantation in Colleton County; a church building was erected thereon, which stands to-day, known as “Bedon Meeting House.”

It is about two and one-half miles from the county seat at Walterboro, and in his memory his descendants of the Bedon name have ever since taken interest therein, contributing to its support, repair and welfare.

Josiah Pendarvis (No. 15), was the last of the family who acknowledged the surname Pendarvis. He dropped his patronymic and assumed that of “Bedon,” the maiden name of his mother.

As to what exactly influenced Josiah Pendarvis to change his surname, at a date when both he and his sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Screven, were parents of married children, they left no record; therefore, without dealing in surmise, it suffices to state the fact that, inspired by some prophetic vision (connected with the life of his father's elder half-brother Joseph), Josiah Pendarvis foresaw the advisability of doing something which would for all time differentiate the posterity of his mother (Mary Bedon), from those of any other maternity; further, that he forthwith accepted the most direct and simple method of accomplishing his purpose.

This method was the change of his own surname and that of each of his children, so that there could no longer be any descendant of John Pendarvis, who had the right to bear the name; and this Josiah Pendarvis (only living son of Josiah Pendarvis, the only son of John Pen-

Josiah Pendarvis (No. 15), married January 1, 1778, Elizabeth Louisa Stobo, born December 22, 1758, and died December 1, 1822, daughter of Richard Park Stobo and Mary, daughter of William Harvey and his wife, Sarah.

Richard Park Stobo (born ; died February 27, 1785), was son of James Stobo, the son of Reverend Archibald Stobo and his wife Elizabeth, but there is no record of the name of the wife of James Stobo.

Rev. Archibald Stobo, the pioneer of his family in America, was a Presbyterian clergyman from Peebleshire, Scotland, who embarked under the auspices of the Presbytery of Caledonia to join and minister to a colony settled at Darien, Georgia.

Dalcho, in his Church History of Carolina, says "the vessel 'Rising Sun,' a Scotch frigate, which from Darien when surrendered to the Spaniards, when bound to Europe, lost all her masts in the Gulf and came to Ashley river to re-fit on Sept. 3, 1700." The tradition in the family is that when the "Rising Sun" stopped in Charleston Harbor for some repairs, she was visited by a party in a yawl from one of the adjacent islands, who requested that if there was a parson aboard that he would spend the night with them so that he might officiate at a marriage.

Mr. Stobo, consenting to do this, landed with his wife and Bible (which is still in the possession of the family) but never re-embarked—as during the night a storm of wind drove the vessel from her anchorage, to which she never got back—and thus the Stobo couple were left on the island. They settled in Charleston where Rev. Archibald Stobo, noted for his force of character, did good work for his denomination and left a family now entwined with many Carolina and Georgia families who have ever made their influence for worth and piety felt. The historian Woodrow also says that the Stobo name is not unknown among the sufferers of the Church of Scotland.

The family Bible of Josiah Pendarvis, Jun'r., is still in good preservation and in the custody of the family of his gt. granddaughter Jane Perry Bedon (No. 280), who married Thomas Stobo Farrow of Spartanburg, So. Ca.

1—2—9—14.

16. HONORABLE JOSEPH BRYAN was born August 8, 1773, and died September 5, 1812. He was the only child and inherited the property of his father, which was on Wilmington and Whitmarsh Islands just below Savannah, Georgia.

His guardian was Pierce Butler, of Georgia, and his early education was in New Jersey—at school and Princeton College, then at Cambridge University, England. On his return from England he studied law in the office of Edmund Randolph, Attorney-General of the United States in Philadelphia in 1793, where he became intimate with John Randolph of Roanoke, also a student under his relative, Edmund Randolph.

This year (1793) was memorable for the yellow fever epidemic in Philadelphia, and it was during that trying time that Joseph Bryan rendered John Randolph some service of which Randolph always spoke as such an act of friendship as no man had ever rendered to another.

They visited each other in their respective homes and their friendship was lifelong; Bryan naming his firstborn Randolph, and Randolph superintending the education of Bryan's sons after his death. The years 1799 to 1802 Joseph Bryan spent traveling over Europe, and on his return home he was elected to Congress (1802-1806) from Georgia, where he was identified with the party known as the Minority party who opposed some of Thomas Jefferson's favorite views. Jefferson's embargo scheme and his French affiliation were opposed by such men as Caesar Rodney, Joseph Nicholson, of Maryland, Clay of Pennsylvania, Rutledge of South Carolina, Bryan of Georgia, and others. The Yazoo speculation was resolutely opposed by Bryan in the legislature of Georgia and deep odium thrown on its managers by the action of that body; and also in Congress, where the applicants from the North for relief never found success until Bryan's death and Randolph's place was filled by John W. Eppes.

In 1805 Joseph Bryan married, at Chestertown, Delia Forman of "Rose Hill," Cecil County, Maryland. His friends—Randolph, Nicholson and Rodney—attended the wedding, which took place at the house of Mrs. Chambers, the sister of General Forman.

After his marriage Joseph Bryan, retiring from public life, returned with his bride to his island home. His married life was eminently happy, his home "Nonchalance," being the type of Southern refinement, hospitality and culture. He was greatly admired and beloved by his half-brothers and sisters (the Screvens), and was long remembered and regretted by a large circle of the best people in Georgia.

In life and death he was absolutely devoted to his native State. His friend Randolph wrote a glowing but most sincere eulogy in which he expressed deep admiration for Bryan in mind, body and heart—concluding with the words of another admirer of Joseph Bryan: "Strange, wonderful man. Some fatality must have taken him from the sphere for which nature designed him and he has left his friends to regret that his talent, integrity, unbounded and unexampled courage should be so early lost to them." Such are some of the features of the firstborn of Elizabeth Pendarvis.

He married April 9, 1805, Delia Forman, born March 4, 1788, and died September 16, 1825, daughter of General Thomas Marsh Forman, of "Rose Hill," Cecil County, Maryland (born 1758, died 1845), son of Ezekiel Augustine Forman and grandson of Thomas Marsh, of "Rose Hill."

SCREVEN.

GENERATION V.

1—2—9—14.

17. MAJOR JOHN SCREVEN was born at "New Hope," on May River, near Bluffton, South Carolina, January 18, 1777, and died November 20, 1830.

On approaching manhood his father wished him to become a merchant, but he preferred the life of a farmer. It is probable that he spent much of his time with his half-brother, Joseph Bryan, who inherited and lived on the north end of Wilmington Island, Georgia.

During a great hurricane September, 1804, his first wife (Hannah Proctor) and her youngest child were killed by the falling of the residence at a place called "Betz," on Wilmington Island.

Major Screven received the title to the rank that he held in the military service of Georgia. He acquired considerable property and lived in Savannah for many of the later years of his life. His remains and those of his last wife (Sarah Ann Proctor) rest in the Laurel Grove Cemetery.

He married first, January 5, 1797, Hannah Proctor, born January 8, 1798, and died September 8, 1804, daughter of Richard Proctor and Mary Ann Vinson.

Richard Proctor was Captain of the Light Dragoons of Beaufort District, South Carolina, in 1812, and moved to Louisiana in 1821.

Major Screven and Hannah Proctor had children as follows:

46. Emily Sophia Screven, b. Nov. 1, 1797; d. Aug. 16, 1833.
m. Samuel Miller Bond—issue.
47. James Proctor Screven, b. Oct. 11, 1799; d. July 16, 1859.
m. Georgia Hannah Bryan—issue.
48. Martha Screven, b. Sept. 13, 1801; d. Feb. 1834.
m. Dr. William Coffee Daniel—issue.
49. Richard Screven, b. Aug. 1, 1803; d. Sept. 8, 1804.

Let it be noted that the descendants of Major John Screven No. 17, are the only branch of Screven who became known as the Georgia Screvens. The descendants of both of his brothers remained citizens of Beaufort County, South Carolina, up to the Civil War.

18. DOCTOR RICHARD BEDON SCREVEN was born September 6, 1778, and died in 1856.

He spent his life in St. Luke's Parish, Beaufort District, South Carolina, and between the occupation of physician and planter he spent a long and honored career.

He married first, May 1, 1800, Alice Pendarvis, born June 28, 1781. She was his first cousin and the eldest living daughter of his uncle, Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, who changed his name to Bedon some two years after their marriage.

In the family Bible of her father, her name is erased for disobedience in becoming the wife of her cousin against the approval of her parents, but forgiveness was granted later in 1804, and recorded.

Among the personal possessions left at home when Alice eloped was a small silver spoon with a tiny hole in the bowl.

Mrs. Richard Bedon, as the wife of her elder brother, became mistress of the old family home and found the spoon there. She gave it to her granddaughter, Sallie Boykin Bedon (No. 281), with the tradition attached, namely: that when young Screven was leaving for Paris to take his degree in medicine he gave his cousin Alice that spoon with the injunction to use it whenever she drank her coffee and the waste through the hole which he had punctured therein would remind her of his love.

She married January 11, 1798 (his second wife), Major William Hazzard, of Hazzard Hall, near Port Royal, South Carolina, born June 15, 1759 and died July 25, 1821, son of Colonel William Hazzard and Catherine, daughter of Thomas Wigg, Esquire, of Port Royal.

Colonel Hazzard was an officer of the British army from which he resigned to join the American revolution. An old oil portrait represents him in British regimentals. The son, Major Hazzard was also in the Revolutionary army as Aide to Genl. Anthony Wayne and was wounded at Savannah. He married first Mary Fuller and had two sons William Wigg Hazzard and Thomas Fuller Hazzard—then he married Sarah Screven and they had children as follows:

58. Sarah Catherine Hazzard, b. 1800; d. March 27, 1873.

To distinguish the respective Thomas Elliotts of about the same period is difficult, but Thomas son of William above, had three sons—Thomas who married Sarah Miles, Benjamin who married Mary Odingsell and Samuel who married Elizabeth Sanders.

Thomas, who married Sarah, lived in Berkeley County, S. Ca. and left a large group of children, among whom was Capt. Barnard Elliott, who married Catherine Hazzard (sister to Major William Hazzard (No. 20), from whom descend branches of the Habersham, Elliott and Milledge families of Georgia; and also one Isabella, who married James West.

Martha Screven and James West had children as follows:

Alice Pendarvis (No. 32), married in May, 1800, which was over two years before her father, Josiah Pendarvis, changed his surname from Pendarvis to that of his mother "Bedon."

This may account for what seems to have been the ever-recurring difficulty in the recognition of the true degree of consanguinity between her descendants and those of her brothers and sisters whose names were all changed to Bedon in 1802.

Her daughter Alice (Mrs. Guerard), was the last descendant of Mary Bedon to have in her name that of Pendarvis.

35. CAPTAIN RICHARD B. BEDON was born at "Horseshoe," September 9, 1786, spent his life there and died August 28, 1857.

The prefix Richard was made when his surname was changed to Bedon, December 18, 1802. He graduated first degree as Bachelor of Arts at Brown College, Providence, Rhode Island, September 3, 1806; delivering an oration on "Pleasures and Pains of Memory."

His diploma is upon parchment and when translated from the Latin, reads as follows:

Everlasting greeting in the Lord to all those, who shall complete this course.

Be it known to you, that the President of Brown University in America, with the concurrence of the other members of the Faculty, does bestow upon Richard B. Bedon, who has been found qualified by the usual examination, the First Degree in Arts, and has given to him to be enjoyed all the privileges and honors pertaining to those who have obtained this Diploma.

In Witness whereof we subscribe our names and affix the seal of the College to this Diploma.

Given with academic rites at Providence, R. I., on the third day of September, Anno Domini, 1806.

Asa Messer; Praeses.

Richard B. Bedon was elected Captain of the State troops in 1812, but he was not given to public life. Decidedly literary in his tastes, Captain Bedon spent most of his life in his library in which he collected for his enjoyment a choice collection of classics in both the ancient and modern languages. He was quite notable for his generosity, taking the form of contributing freely toward the education of his younger relatives whose advantages were limited.

Without being able to precisely fix upon either the date or the individuals concerned, it may be safely affirmed that unbeknown to him, sometime during the life of Captain Richard B. Bedon—born Bedon Pendarvis—that an inquiry on the part of the English branch of the Pendarves family, was instituted in the city of Charleston, South Carolina, for the purpose of communicating with some living representative of the American branch of their blood, in whose favor some devise, or intent to devise, in England seemed to refer.

This being so, what happened? Now listen: Some attorney representing said English inquisition first read the will of the pioneer, Joseph Pendarvis—next he read the will of Joseph's only son, John Pendarvis; which as stated on page 32 was accompanied by the letters of administration issued in 1724 by the Ordinary, Governor Nicholson. In this latter document, no legal eye could have failed to note that the scribe had represented Joseph, the eldest son of John Pendarvis by his first marriage, as "the only surviving son of the dec'd."

Without any good reason for the attorney to question such statement, he probably accepted that error as a true condition; therefore, when he followed it up by reading the will of said Joseph—the contents of his will precluded all further search after a possible American devisee—unless said attorney should accidentally have been acquainted with certain facts relating to the family calling themselves Bedon.

Now let us see how improbable it must have been for him to have had any such knowledge.

First. It would have been remarkable had there existed any information at all relating to any of the Bedon family in said city of Charleston later than Colonial days, as none of the name lived long after the Revolution.

Second. The only lawfully begotten Pendarvis living after 1735 was Josiah, son of John Pendarvis and his second wife Hannah; and he had, some fifty or more years anteceding said inquisition, moved over one hundred miles away from the neighborhood where his family records had been kept—settling, living and dying in the extreme western-most parish in the State; and this Pendarvis had married Mary, the last of the name of Bedon.

Third. Their only son, Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, displaced his family name for that of his mother, Bedon; but no record of this change was ever made in said city of Charleston—it having been done at Columbia, South Carolina, and need only to have been known to the members of the Legislature passing the act, and the immediate neighbors of the family concerned.

Fourth. Captain Richard B. Bedon (born Bedon Pendarvis), son of Josiah (Pendarvis, Junior) Bedon, was educated at Brown College,

BEDON.

Rhode Island, hence he not only lacked that general acquaintance usually brought about by collegiate association within one's own State, but himself being a literary recluse, his life was not of "that ordinary goodish fellowship, whereof this world holds record." So that there were very few beyond his immediate neighbors who had any reason to know that he was born to the surname Pendarvis. The common impression of those who had no right to know the truth, was that his family had changed their name to disassociate themselves with the tattle relating to the notorious "Tory Dick" Pendarvis (No. 13), who was murdered at May River in 1781; and this the family did not deny, as to do so would have been silly.

Lastly, all this being so, even supposing that the Charleston attorney did know that such a man lived as Captain Richard B. Bedon—inasmuch as he might very well have known that Major Richard Bedon had settled in Colleton County, there was much more good reason for him to have presumed Captain Richard B. Bedon to be the direct male descendant of Major Richard Bedon, than to have supposed that he was the Pendarvis devisee for whom he was in search.

So the English inquisition came to an odd end, but not without regrettable sequelae; as, engendered therefrom, many years after the change of name from Pendarvis to Bedon, a rumor found circulation in the said city of Charleston to the effect that the investigation on the part of the English branch of the family called Pendarves, had resulted in establishing that the American branch, to whom the English devise only could refer, had become extinct. This conjecture the Bedon family never heard, but even had they done so (except that they probably would not have withheld information certainly due their English kin), they never would have disavored that consummation in Carolina, for which every controlling member of the family assuming the name of Bedon had most devoutly wished.

With creed-like zeal, that family had religiously observed the injunction laid down upon his descendants by Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, when in 1802 he assumed the surname of his mother, Mary Bedon, namely: that they should never allow themselves to be known by the surname Pendarvis. Indeed, so rigidly was his behest fulfilled, that, until so informed by the compiler of this Record, not one out of ten of his living descendants ever knew that they were not from the direct male line of Bedon, but in reality were the true, continuous, lawfully begotten male line of the pioneer, Joseph Pendarvis; furthermore, not one of the very few who did know this, has ever recanted or done more than yielded unwilling assent to the publication of such fact.

After careful consideration, however, the compiler of this Record concluded that whatever benefit could result from said injunction had been accomplished—and that the time had come when the descendants of Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, only son of Josiah Pendarvis (the only son of John Pendarvis who ever left lawfully begotten issue) and his wife, Mary Bedon, should have at hand a concise pedigree. Not simply in form of a chart, but one which carried with it all the documentary evidences whereby such pedigree is substantiated—and also a clear understanding as to how, when and why their ancestor, Josiah Pendarvis, Junior, saw fit to change his and their name to Bedon, as well as the eventual conjecture growing out of the English inquiry based upon the error of the scribe of an Ordinary, who must have signed important documents which he never could have perused.

A pedigree wherewith not even the least may say:

“Both the lineage and the certain sire,

From whom I sprung, from me are hidden yet.”

Captain Richard B. Bedon married March 15, 1809, Jane Lowndes Bulloch Perry, born in 1789 and died May 5, 1870, daughter of Doctor James M. Perry and Frances, daughter of Major James Hunter, of Charleston, South Carolina, and Frances Dott, widow Fayssour.

Doctor James M. Perry was the son of Josiah Perry and Jane, daughter of Doctor James Bulloch and Jean, daughter of Reverend Archibald Stobo and his wife Elizabeth.

Josiah Perry (born 1727) was son of Benjamin Perry, of Charleston, South Carolina, and his wife, Elizabeth.

Evidencing the influence of his mother, who was great-granddaughter to Rev. Archibald Stobo, the noted pioneer Presbyterian clergyman of Carolina, Captain Bedon affiliated himself with that creed and became an elder in the Bethel Presbyterian congregation at Walterboro, South Carolina, but he did not forget the mission established by the donation of land on the part of his father as follows:

October 18, 1841.

Received of R. B. Bedon One Hundred dollars in full for work done to the Meeting house commonly known as Bedon's Meeting house in the neighborhood of Walterboro.

STEPHEN CROSBY.

Mrs. Fayssoux was a refugee from France who came to Charleston, South Carolina, with her two orphan children, one of whom became the noted Doctor Peter Dott Fayssoux, Surgeon-General of the Revolutionary Army of South Carolina, and later in 1789 he was one of the founders of the South Carolina Medical Society.

"The initiation movement in 1789 to organize the South Carolina Medical Society—to quote Dr. Middleton Michel, the retiring president in 1880—seems to have been taken by Dr. Peter Fayssoux, since it was at his residence that Dr. David Ramsay and Dr. Alexander Barron met in December, 1789 for the fulfillment of this commendable purpose.

• • • • •
"The primordial meetings of this ancient organization were held in alternate succession at its members' residences until the Society increased in numbers too considerable to trespass further upon private hospitality. They then sought naturally the unrestrained and more commodious resorts; first of Harris' Tavern, then of William's Inn—places difficult to locate now that old Charleston may be said to have 'gone out of town.'

• • • • •
"But curiosity sends us out in search of those historic sites, and thus we are able to state that William's Coffee House was at the corner of Tradd Street and Beadon's Alley.

• • • • •
"Says Dr. Michel: 'We find Dr. Fayssoux inaugurating a movement which of itself places him in immediate relation with his professional brethren for all future time—convening his associates around him at the corner of Friend and Tradd Streets to establish this Society. This house stood until recently, as a queer old monument to the episode of its youth, but alas! the requirements of modern improvement in widening Friend Street, have within the last few years, forever obliterated from our sight this historic vestige of Revolutionary incident.'

PENDARVIS—BEDON FAMILY.

GENERATION V.

1—2—9—15.

The Perry family of Carolina descend from a younger son of James Graham, 5th Earl of Montrose, so true to the Catholic faith that the Arms of the family was a triangle with the motto "fight, conquer, or die."

Dr. James Bulloch (b. 1701 in Scotland) was a highly educated scholar from Edinburgh, who emigrated to Carolina in 1729, where he married Jean Stobo and settled in St. Paul's Parish, where he was Justice in Commission of the Peace in 1735, Special Agent to the Creek Indians in 1741, and Member of Assembly in 1751. After his children grew up and all married, he left his daughters in Carolina and moved to Georgia with his only son Archibald, where Dr. Bulloch became Justice in Commission of the Peace for Christ Church Parish in 1767 and a member of the Provincial Congress in 1775.

Archibald Bulloch also became very prominent in Georgia as first President of the new State after the Revolution. He married Ann, daughter of Col. James DeVeaux, of South Carolina, and his wife Ann, daughter of Richard Fairchild and his wife Ann, daughter of Landgrave Edmund Bellinger and his wife Sarah Cartwright, and they left many descendants in Georgia. Among the more notable is the well-known genealogist, Dr. J. G. B. Bulloch, of Savannah, Ga.

"Teddy" Roosevelt, the rough-riding President of the United States, is also a descendant in the female line from the noted families of Bellinger, Bulloch, DeVeaux, Fairchild and Stobo of South Carolina Colonial stock.

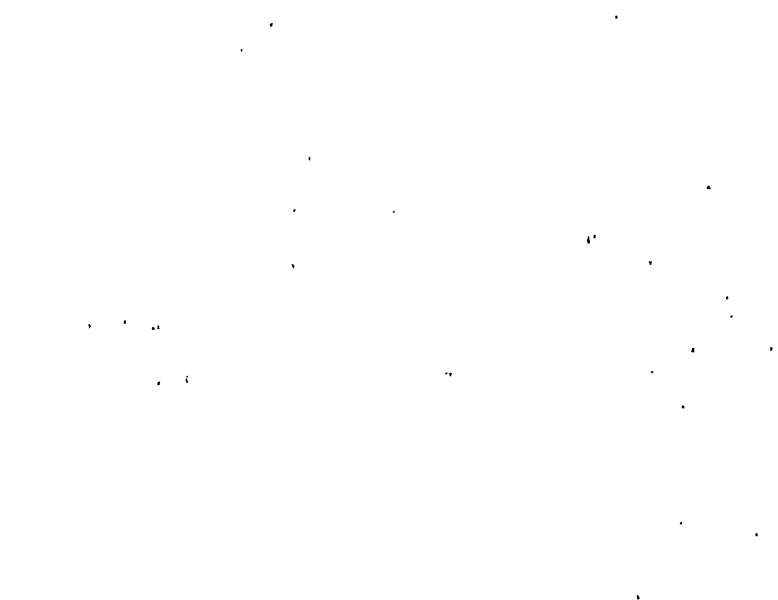

So then, Captain Richard Bedon (No. 35) and his wife, Jane Lowndes Bulloch Perry, were third cousins. They had children as follows:

90. Richard Stobo Bedon, b. Dec. 3, 1809; d. April 11, 1890.

m. Julia Ann Davie—issue.

91. Elizabeth Louisa Bedon, b. April 25, 1815; d. May 14, 1815.

It is curious to note the religious influence of mothers—all the earlier generations of Pendarvis were evidently Episcopallans, but the Bedons seem to have been all Baptists. Josiah the son of Mary Bedon became a Baptist, but his son Richard, whose mother was a Stobo, became a Presbyterian—but his wife, Jane Perry, was an Episcopallan, so most all of his descendants have gone back to the original faith of the Pendarvis family.

Stobo Bedon graduated at the South Carolina College in 1814 and spent his after life in the town of Beaufort, South Carolina, living only a few months after his marriage. Upon the early death of his only child (a posthumous son), the residuary heirs to the estate of his father (Josiah Bedon, No. 15), brought suit to recover the valuable Cat Island property just down the river from Beaufort, which they understood that the will of Josiah Bedon (No. 15), meant was to revert to his estate in the event his son Stobo died without issue.

The Courts, however, decided that the posthumous child having inherited, the mother became the heir of her child; so the title vested in the widow who afterward married her cousin Richard Fuller, who became the noted Baptist evangelist, and they had issue. Thus this

BRYAN.

GENERATION VI.

1—2—9—14—16.

41. JOHN RANDOLPH BRYAN was born on Wilmington Island, Georgia, March 23, 1806, and went to Virginia in 1817, where he entered school in Prince Edward County and continued his education, except for occasional visits to Georgia, until he obtained a warrant in the United States Navy.

He remained in the navy from 1823-32. In 1830, he settled at Eagle Point, Gloucester County, Virginia, where he spent his married life. His home always served as a connecting link between the scattered descendants of Elizabeth Pendarvis. Intensely clannish, nothing was trouble to John R. Bryan to keep up his relationship with all members of his family and he took infinite pains to stimulate mutual regard among the younger members.

During the War of Secession he was able to do a great deal towards the comfort of the various members of his family who were in the Virginia army. His homes in Gloucester and Fluvanna counties were not only ready harbors for many of them who refuged there, but often served as a loving hospital for those who were sick or wounded.

The cemetery is fitly situated for the last resting place of one who was born on a sea island, and served his time in the navy. It is a small but high and dry island, covered with pines, hollies and myrtles, lying in Severn River, an arm of the Chesapeake Bay, and within a quarter of a mile of his old homestead. His epitaph reads:

He married January 27, 1830, Elizabeth Tucker Coalter, born June 25, 1805, died March 28, 1856, daughter of Honorable John Coalter (Judge of Virginia Court of Appeals), born August 20, 1769, and Anne Frances Bland, born September 26, 1779, daughter of Honorable St. George Tucker and Frances (widow of John Randolph and mother of John Randolph of Roanoke), daughter of Theodorick Bland and Frances, daughter of Colonel Drury Bolling and Elizabeth, daughter of Francis Meriwether and Mary, daughter of Launcelot Bathurst, son of Sir Edward Bathurst of Sussex County, England.

Judge Coalter was son of Michael Coalter and Elizabeth, daughter of James Moore and Jane, daughter of John W. Walker and Katherine, daughter of John Rutherford and Katherine Isabella Allaine.

Michael Coalter was son of James Coalter of Londonderry, Ireland, and Margaret Hutson.

St. George Tucker, born July 29, 1752, first settled in Bermuda, thence came to Virginia and was Lieutenant-Colonel in the Revolution; Professor at William and Mary College 1790; Councillor of State 1781; member of Annapolis Convention 1786; and later in 1804 was Judge of Court of Appeals of Virginia; was son of Colonel Henry Tucker of the Royal Army of Bermuda, and grandson of the Honorable Henry Tucker of Crayford, Kent County, England and of the Royal Council of Bermuda.

Colonel Robert Bolling was son of Robert Bolling (first of his name in Virginia), and his second wife Anne, daughter of John Stith of Brunswick County, Virginia (Drury Bolling's first wife was Jane Rolph of Pocahontas descent).

Theodorick Bland was son of Honorable Richard Bland (Member of House of Burgesses 1702), and his second wife Elizabeth, daughter of Colonel William Randolph of Turkey Island; and grandson of Theodorick Bland and Annie, daughter of Governor Richard Bennet and Mary Anne, daughter of Honorable John Utie, member of Council of Virginia in 1629.

William Randolph of Turkey Island, came to Virginia in 1673; and his wife was Mary, daughter of Henry Isham and his wife Catharine, widow of Royall.

John W. Walker was son of John Walker and Kate McKnight.

John Randolph Bryan and his wife Elizabeth had children as follows:

101. John Coalter Bryan, b. March 2, 1831; d. June 1, 1853.

43. HONORABLE THOMAS FORMAN BRYAN was born January 4, 1809, and died September 27, 1875.

He was adopted and educated by his grandfather, General Forman. Graduated at St. Mary's College, Baltimore, he came back to Georgia and drew the family home on Wilmington Island, where he settled down to plant; but sold the place in 1831 and bought Broughton Island, McIntosh County, in the Altamaha River.

He was elected Senator to the Georgia Legislature in 1847, and was later on member of the Confederate Congress. Impulsive and generous, Thomas F. Bryan was a typical Southern planter who enjoyed the warmest attachment of all who knew him.

He married first, November 19, 1834, Florida Troup, born September 16, 1813, died September 23, 1847, daughter of Governor George Michael Troup and his second wife Ann, daughter of George Carter of Virginia.

Governor Troup, born September 8, 1780, was son of George Troup and Katherine, daughter of Captain John McIntosh and Katherine, daughter of Lachlan McIlvray.

Captain John McIntosh was nephew of John Mohr McIntosh, whose line is now entitled to the chieftainship of McIntosh of Bortum; and grandson of Lachlan McIntosh of Knocknagail, Scotland, and Mary Lockhart.

m. Holmes Conrad—issue.
117. Thomas Marsh Forman, b. Dec. 22, 1847; d. July, 6, 1848.

Thomas Bryan (No. 43) had his name changed by the Act of the Legislature of Maryland, January 15, 1846, hence his last two children by his first wife were born "Forman." The names of the eldest five children were never changed to Forman.

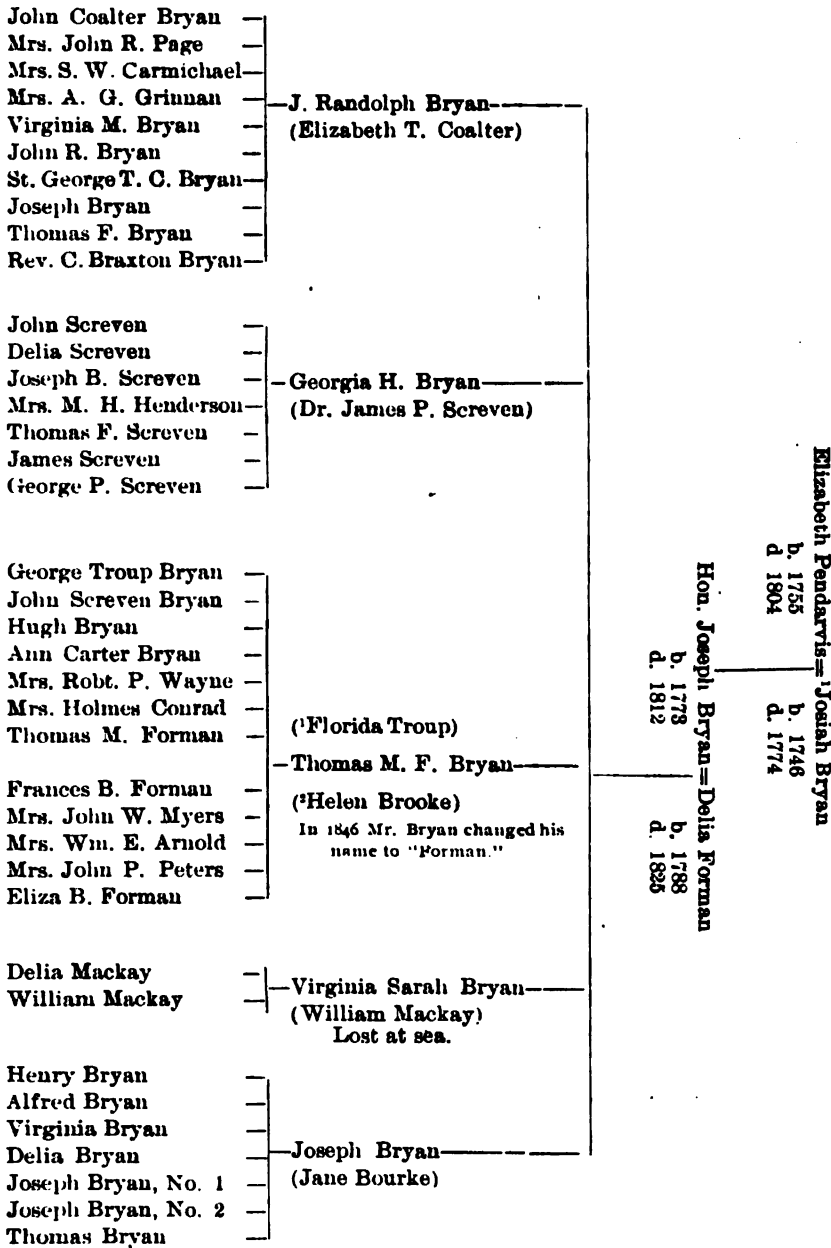

Thomas F. Bryan married secondly, August 30, 1849, Helen Brooke, daughter of Honorable Francis T. Brooke, of Fredericksburg, Virginia, and Mary Champe, daughter of Edward Carter, of "Blenheim" and Sally Champe; and granddaughter of John Carter, of "Shirley" and Miss Hill; and a great-granddaughter of Robert (King) Carter and his second wife, Betty Landon.

Francis T. Brooke was son of Richard Brooke, of "Smithfield," and Ann Hay Taliaferro, and grandson of Robert Brooke, Knight of the "Golden Horseshoe" and his wife, Phoebe.

They had children as follows:

47. DOCTOR JAMES PROCTOR SCREVEN was born near Bluffton, South Carolina, October 11, 1799, and died July 16, 1859. In 1809 he was entered at Abbeville, South Carolina, at the school of the noted teacher, Reverend Moses Waddell, and when sufficiently advanced after a short period at Chatham Academy, he entered Columbia College, where he graduated with honor in 1818. He then studied medicine, graduating at Jefferson Medical College in 1820. After several years of study and travel in Europe, he began the practice of medicine at Savannah, Georgia.

He retired from practice in 1835, and devoted himself to his agricultural interests. In 1834 and 1835 he had taken a deep interest in the States Rights Party, but he was an unsuccessful candidate for the Georgia Senate. In 1849 he became interested in the affairs of Savannah. Soon after he became a member of the City Council and in March, 1852, he was elected captain of the Savannah Volunteers Company, one of the oldest military organizations of the country. He was the first president of the Savannah, Albany and Gulf Railway, and later of the Atlantic and Gulf Railroad Company. He was a member of the City Council in 1854, and during the great yellow fever epidemic of that year as Acting Mayor, he courageously attended to all of his numerous duties. In 1855 while absent in the city's interest he was elected to the Senate of Georgia, and in 1856 he was chosen Mayor of Savannah, filling both of these positions with distinguished ability.

Ill health began with Doctor Screven in September, 1858, and continued until his death at the Hot Springs of Virginia, July 15, 1859. His remains were interred in Laurel Grove Cemetery which he had assisted in establishing. Of him the Savannah Republican said: "The characteristics of Doctor Screven were not only an acute and comprehensive intellect, but an energy of will and perseverance of industry which made him anywhere and everywhere a man of mark."

He married December 18, 1820, Georgia Hannah Bryan (No. 42), of this record.

52. LOUISA SCREVEN was born in 1802 and died in 1820.

She married in 1819 Doctor Edward Cuthbert, son of Doctor James Hazzard Cuthbert and his second wife, Fannie Furze, and grandson of Doctor James Cuthbert and his second wife, Mary (widow of Edward Wigg) and daughter of Colonel William Hazzard and Catharine, daughter of Thomas Wigg, Esq. (See No. 20.)

The Cuthbert family is one among the very few, the American pioneer of which, considered it his duty and privilege to bring with him from his home across the seas, an attested copy of his pedigree.

Dr. James Cuthbert did this, and the pedigree of Cuthbert of "Castle Hill," Inverness, Scotland, attested by twenty or more Members of the Scottish Parliament has ever since been in America.

This document traces Dr. James Cuthbert (as son of Lord John Cuthbert of "Castle Hill" and his wife Jean, dau. of Rt. Rev. William Hay, Bishop of Moray) through several generations back to George Cuthbert who, May 17, 1412, commanded the successful forces of King James of Scotland in the battle of Harlaw against Donald of the Isles.

Jacob Deveau was son of Izrael DeVeaux and Elizabeth Martin, and grandson of the Huguenot refugee, Andre DeVeaux.

John Barnwell was the youngest son of the emigrant Colonel John "Tuscarora" Barnwell and Ann Berners of London.

Colonel Barnwell was dubbed "Tuscarora" from having commanded the expedition sent by South Carolina to aid in repression of the Tuscarora Indians in North Carolina. He was a cadet of the family of "Trimlestown" Barnewall; an Earldom created in 1461 for a younger son of Barnewall of "Crickstown, County Meath, Ireland—the heads of which family had been Knights since 1301.

The first Baron of Trimlestown was Robert Barnewall, Lord High Chancellor of Ireland and probably the most notable character of the name. The family in Ireland have ever been staunch Roman Catholics and tradition says that the cause of the emigration of "Tuscarora" John was "the marble heart" of his family towards his becoming a member of the Anglican church.

Alice Screven and Doctor Jacob D. Guerard had children as follows:

165. Joseph St. Julien Guerard, b. Jan. 6, 1822; d. 1872.

He graduated at West Point Military Academy in 1828. He joined the United States Army as Second Lieutenant of the Second Infantry under General Gaines in Florida and was transferred in July, 1831, to the Fourth Infantry stationed at Baton Rouge, where he remained until 1835, when he joined General Gaines again in Florida when the war with the Seminoles was going on, remaining in active service until he was ordered to Fort Leavenworth as Indian Agent.

In 1836, he returned to Florida as First Lieutenant of the Fourth Infantry and was in the battle of Okechobee with General Taylor. Later on he joined General Scott in the Cherokee Nation and was selected to take charge of the removal of 3,500 Cherokee Indians to the Territories.

In 1838, as Captain of the Eighth Infantry, he served with General Worth on the Canadian frontier where he served until 1840 in the Winnebago campaign, after which he was ordered back to Florida.

As ranking officer of the Eighth Infantry when that regiment under General Scott on September 21, 1846 stormed and carried the Heights of Monterey, he was brevetted first as Major, then as Lieutenant-colonel for gallantry and martial conduct; and, after the battle of Molino del Rey, September 8, 1847, he was made Colonel.

After the Mexican War, he was on duty in the recruiting service at Albany, New York, until 1851, when on his way to his regiment to take the field again in Texas, he died in New Orleans.

Colonel Screven was tall and strongly built, and he had a singularly attractive countenance.

He married June 27, 1831, Louise Pintard Davidson, born June 28, 1814, died December 24, 1889, daughter of Doctor Richard Davidson and Eliza Noel, daughter of John Pintard, born May 18, 1759, of New York City, and Eliza Brusher; and granddaughter of John Pintard and Mary Cameron; and great-granddaughter of John Pintard and Catherine Carre, refugees from Rochelle, France, 1683.

56. ELIZABETH HAMILTON SCREVEN known as "Hamilton" and daughter of the second marriage of Doctor Richard Bedon Screven, was born October 20, 1829, and died October 24, 1900.

She married November 11, 1845, Doctor Jacob Strobhart, born December 24, 1848, and died in 1858.

He was of Swiss descent, his ancestors having come to America with Jean Pierre Purry, who settled (with intention of establishing a town), on the first heights on the Carolina side of the Savannah River. The place proved to be too unhealthy and was finally abandoned, nothing remaining but the cemetery which indicates that quite a number of people of means and culture must have made the effort to establish a Town.

They had children as follows:

- 189. Jacob Strobhart, b. Sept. 25, 1846.
m. Caroline T. Evans—issue.
- 190. Mary Hamilton Strobhart, b. April 27, 1848.

57. DOCTOR BENJAMIN SMITH SCREVEN, only son of the second marriage of Doctor Richard B. Screven, was born November 20, 1821.

He graduated at the old "University of Pennsylvania," Philadelphia, and practiced medicine at Savannah, Georgia, until 1848, when he pledged his medical services to a party of Georgians who undertook a prospecting tour across the Rocky Mountains into California, which trip lasted nine months. He came home on a visit, but his prospects were so bright in California that he returned with the intention of moving his family as soon as he could provide a reasonably comfortable home for them.

He settled in the mining town of Mariposa, from which information reached his family that on one of his professional trips through the mountains he was waylaid and murdered, May 15, 1858.

He married August 3, 1848, Cornelia Ann Archer, born October 9, 1826, daughter of Hugh Archer and Susan Matilda, daughter of Fardon S. Tillinghast and his wife, Mary Anderson, of Savannah, Georgia.

They had one child as follows:

75. CAROLINA PROCTOR was born April 30, 1816, and died March 6, 1875. She married March 21, 1832, Daniel Elliott Huger, born September 25, 1806, and died December 25, 1874, son of Judge Daniel E. Huger and Isabella, daughter of Honorable Arthur Middleton and Mary, daughter of Walter Izard and Elizabeth, daughter of Colonel John Gibbes and Anne, daughter of Governor Thomas Broughton and Anne, daughter of Governor Sir Nathaniel Johnson.

Judge Huger was son of Daniel Huger (3d) and Sabina, daughter of William Elliott of "Accabee" and Sabina Codner; and grandson of Daniel Huger (2d), and Mary, daughter of Isaac Cordes; and great-grandson of Daniel Huger (Huguenot refugee) and Margaret Perdrian.

Honorable Arthur Middleton (Signer of Declaration) was son of Honorable Henry Middleton and Mary, daughter of John Williams and Mary, daughter of Richard Baker (1st) and his wife, Joanna; and grandson of Honorable Arthur Middleton, Royal Lieutenant Governor of South Carolina.

Some Elliott records say that William Elliott, son of the pioneer, William Elliott and his wife, Ann Schenking, was "Accabee" and the father of Sabina who married Daniel Huger (3d); but other very reliable records say that William (2d) married first Hester Butler and had no issue; then he married Frances Guerin and they had William, Thomas, and Joseph—and this last William married Sabina Codner as above.

The line of William Elliott (1st), is extinct in the male line. His religious persuasions were Baptist, and he gave the lot on which the first Baptist Church in Charleston, S. C., was built, but his exact connection with the Robert Elliotts who came with Rev. William Screven to find refuge in Carolina from persecution in Maine on account of the religious tenet held against infant baptism, is not established. That branch of Elliott is also extinct in the male line.

She married December 31, 1839, Christopher John Gadsden, born October 3, 1812, died May 5, 1854, son of Christopher Gadsden (United States Navy) and Mury, daughter of Samuel Ashe and Hannah, daughter of Andrew Deveau (3d) and Catherine, daughter of John Barnwell (2d) and Phoebe, daughter of John Chaplin and Phoebe Jenkins.

Andrew Deveau (3d) was son of Andrew Deveau (2d) and Hannah, daughter of John Palmer and Elizabeth, daughter of Landgrave Edmund Bellinger and Sarah Cartwright.

Some genealogists question the Bellinger and Palmer lineage above, but the Bellinger records are as stated and there is no evidence disproving it. For Barnwell pedigree see (No. 54.)

The Ashe line is not clear, but Samuel Ashe is supposed to be the son of John Ashe and Grace Codner.

83. COLONEL THOMAS EDWARD SCREVEN was born April 5, 1830.

Among the many gallant and intrepid defenders of the South during the War of Secession, descending from Pendarvis and Bedon, none did more continuous or harder service than Thomas Edward Screven.

In the spring of 1862, he entered the service as Captain of the Beaufort District Troup, which company, as a part of the Hampton Legion, was among the first to leave the State of South Carolina for duty in Virginia. The Hampton Legion later on was, with other cavalry troops, formed into the Second South Carolina Regiment of cavalry with M. C. Butler as Colonel, and when Major Hampton died, Captain Screven became major and subsequently colonel of said regiment.

The Second South Carolina Regiment of cavalry served the first two years of the war in the Army of Northern Virginia under General Joseph E. Johnston and after that with General R. E. Lee.

When General J. E. B. Stuart made his raid in which he captured Chambersburg, Pennsylvania, with its garrison, a part of his carefully selected command was the Second South Carolina Regiment of cavalry, with M. C. Butler as Colonel and Thomas Edward Screven as Lieutenant-Colonel. That is the longest continued march on record, wherein the troops engaged only stopped one-half hour on the way.

He married December 2, 1858, Amanda Jenkins, born October 29, 1831, daughter of Benjamin Jenkins and Isabel Chapman.

They had children as follows:

264. Alice Screven, b. April 5, 1865.

BEDON.

GENERATION VI.

1—2—9—15—35.

90. COLONEL RICHARD STOBO BEDON was born at "Horseshoe," Colleton County, South Carolina, December 3, 1809, and died there April 11, 1890. His title as colonel was received as aide to Governor Means, of South Carolina.

He graduated from the South Carolina College in 1830 and was a man of mark, well-proportioned and handsome, as well as being the most lovable of men. From early life to green old age he was, without ceasing, a maker of the history of his country.

Representative from his native county for many years, eight of the last of which was as State Senator, he figured prominently in every public issue.

President of the Agricultural Society and one of the organizers of the "Granger Movement," his efforts were ever in the direction of the education and elevation of the small farmer. The keynote, however, of the character of Colonel "Dick" Bedon was his loving kindness which beamed in his countenance, and if he had an enemy in the world, it was the lack of opportunity to be reckoned by minutes, for him to counteract a wrong impression.

His death typified his peace-loving life—napping with his newspaper in his front porch, he "fell asleep" in the eighty-first year of his age and now lies buried beside his wife Julia, in the rear of the Presbyterian Church in Columbia, South Carolina.

A FRIEND'S TRIBUTE.

Col. Bedon's life was an eventful one, preserving as he did the characteristics of true manhood through all of its busy scenes—as a man, generous to a fault—charitable to an extent that reached out upon a line, the end of which touched even the immortal shore. His manly attainments were seldom reached in the small compass of human life; quick to perceive, bold to execute whatever his good judgment approved, fearless in the pursuit of right and always for the "sake of right." He adopted nothing in the line of action as an expedient merely, and principle was always a guide to it. As a statesman he had broad and liberal views; his politics Democratic. His character as a gentleman of the olden time that peculiarly marked the era of a past age, when there were giants in the social and political world. He marked the impress of his character upon the history of Carolina, as did few men of his day and generation. In the private circles, none knew him but to love him; wealthy before the war, and moving as he did in the best circles of life, ample opportunity was afforded him in shaping the destiny of our State and contributing much to harmonize action in making South Carolina the unit that she was in our death struggle for liberty. Though not actually engaged in active service, his support rendered, which his ample means admitted, was of incalculable benefit to the cause he espoused; too old to shoulder the musket, yet he found full scope for his active energies in the charities he dispensed to the families of soldiers and others needing relief. In this work he was indefatigable, and the voice of hundreds to-day would rise up and call him blessed.

After the war, when the hopes of our people were crushed, seemingly never to rise again, by the buoyancy of his disposition and well-timed advice, he snatched many from actual despair and gave the reassurance of hope.

When the rosy hues that marked the approach of dawn on our political horizon, always on the alert, he at once sprang with all the energy of his character to the rescue of our down-trodden people, and his acts and accomplishments have passed down a line in history along with the peerless Tracy, who preceded him to the "bourne from whence no traveler returns." They were lights with others that guided in the darkness of the hour—in simile, "the pillar of cloud by day and the pillar of fire by night." It is better for Colleton and the State that Col. Bedon lived. Long will it be ere we shall look upon his like again.

Many may say in all phases of life and its conditions, "friend of my childhood, as one who directed the tottering step; youth and manhood guided, and old age soothed, thou art gone, but to memory thou art dear."

Requiescat in pace.

Over his grave rests a stone on which is engraved the following epitaph, composed by his life-long friend, Rev. Charles S. Vedder, of Charleston, So. Ca.

In Loving Memory
Of
Col. Richard Stobo Bedon.
Born Dec. 3, 1809—Died April 11, 1890.
For more than three score years,
Through times as eventful as his country ever knew,
He maintained
Without shadow or reproach,
The character
Of
A patriot, of whom no sacrifice was ever asked
In vain;
A publicist, to whom station came unsought
And it left unsullied;
A Husband, Father, Friend in whom those sacred names
Had new grace and beauty;
And
A Gentleman in whom native honor, culture,
Lofty purpose and gracious courtesy
Had the sublime inspiration and mould
Of Christian Faith.

He married December 30, 1830, Julia Ann Davie, only child of Hyder Ali Davie and Elizabeth, daughter of John Jones of Northampton County, North Carolina and Ann Turner of Southampton County, Virginia.

Hyder Ali Davie, born October 29, 1786, died July 17, 1848, was second son of General William R. Davie and Sarah, daughter of General Allen Jones and Mary, daughter of Thomas Haynes and Martha, daughter of Herbert Jones and his wife, Martha.

Mrs. Ann Turner Jones, as widow of John Jones, married Capt. James Exum and from that union descended the families of Meares, Ramsome, and Trezevant of North Carolina. She had only one brother, Harrowd Jones; he married Betsy Irby, of Halifax, North Carolina (a notable beauty) and they had one son, Harry Jones, who married Mary, daughter of President Tyler.

William R. Davie was son of Archibald Davie, Esquire, (emigrant from Whitehaven, England) and Mary, only sister of Reverend William Richardson, founder of the Presbyterian Church at Wax-Haws, Lancaster County, South Carolina.

General Allen Jones was son of Robin Jones and Sarah, daughter of Robert Cobb and Elizabeth, daughter of Reverend Daniel Allen, all of North Carolina.

William R. Davie was born June 20, 1750, at Egremont, near Whitehaven, England, and emigrated in 1763 to join his uncle, Rev. William Richardson, who had adopted him. Tradition says that he had a brother George—and of late there has turned up some of the name in Missouri who claim to be "descended from a George Davie who came from Georgia."

William R. Davie has too much of an historical career for it to be recounted here—but, in a few words, he graduated with the highest honors of his class; at once joined the Revolutionary Army as Lieutenant in Captain Barnett's Company, which formed a part of Pulaski legion, in which he soon rose to Major; was wounded at Stono, So. Ca. Later on he was several times a member of the Legislature of No. Ca. without opposition, and was also member of the Convention of North Carolina on the Federal Constitution.

In 1799, Gen'l. Davie was elected Governor of No. Carolina, and he resigned that office to proceed on an embassy to France, associated with Oliver Ellsworth, Ch. Justice of the United States, and W. W. Murray, Esq., of New York, resident minister at Hague. In 1800, they concluded a treaty with the Consular Government of France.

Gen'l Davie was a Hamiltonian Federalist, and, after his return from France, he left the State of North Carolina in disgust upon his defeat by a Democrat, in his second campaign for Governor.

He moved into South Carolina accompanied by a dozen or more prominent families of his neighbors in Halifax County, North Carolina, and they all settled in Chester County, South Carolina; his own home being at "Tivoli," near Landsford on the Catawba River.

Allen Jones, born 1739, son of Robin Jones and Sarah Cobb, was born in North Carolina,—was delegate to the first North Carolina Revolutionary Congress in 1774 at New Berne—afterward was General of North Carolina State troops during the Revolution—and subsequently, in 1779, was delegate to the Continental Congress at Philadelphia.

Thomas Haynes, born 1686, married February 2, 1708, Martha Jones—was of the family who have very old tablets in Stephney Church, St. Dunstan's, England. In 1700 two brothers, Isaac and Thomas, were staunch adherents of King Charles II., and had to flee the country. It is supposed by some that the family of Haynes of North Carolina, is identical with Hayne, of South Carolina.

106. CAPTAIN JOHN RANDOLPH BRYAN was born at Chatham January 9, 1841.

Among the descendants of Pendarvis-Bedon so many of whom during the War of Secession, were filled with devotion to the cause of the South, the nerve and intrepidity of John Randolph Bryan (No. 106), may properly be mentioned.

He left school April, 1861, and joined the Virginia Army as Second Lieutenant in (Ewell's) the Thirty-second Regiment. When the Virginia Army was turned over to the Confederate States, Lieutenant Bryan was appointed chief clerk in the Adjutant-General's office of General John B. Magruder, from which he was detailed for special duty under General Joseph E. Johnston.

When General Magruder was ordered to Texas, Lieutenant Bryan served under General R. S. Ewell in the defenses around Richmond; then was made Ordnance Sergeant for the brigade of General McLaws, with whom he served until after the battle of Fredericksburg, December, 1862.

The following spring he was commissioned Captain and Inspector of Field Transportation, serving with General Sam Jones and General John C. Breckenridge. When the latter was made Secretary of War, Captain Bryan was ordered to Charlottesville, Virginia, where he remained in active service until Lee surrendered at Appomattox.

In the army of the Peninsular he was dubbed "Balloon Bryan" by his comrades.

Dangerous indeed were his balloon trips of reconnaissance above the army of the enemy—which ascensions were made by him seated in a basket suspended from a cotton bag, coated over so as to be air-tight; then inflated by hot air produced from pine knots fired with turpentine, whilst the control of the affair, namely: a coil of cotton rope played over a rough windlass, remained with a crew on land.

Startling and risky as this method was, Randolph Bryan on several occasions by such means did do successful aerial scout duty for General

CAPT. JOHN RANDOLPH BRYAN.

Joseph E. Johnston, bringing him essential information as to the position and movements of the Union armies—accompanying the same with estimates he had made as to the numerical force represented by the respective arms of the service—artillery, cavalry and infantry.

Only once did accident occur, and the balloon got loose from its moorings; on which occasion Bryan's air craft, after careering over Chesapeake Bay quite a time, was finally taken by a friendly current to the side of safety and landed within eight miles of where the ascent was made. Whereupon Bryan succeeded in reaching the presence of General Johnston in time to tell him by what roads the enemy was moving and thereby enabled him to be prepared for the attack which was made the next morning just before day.

By an interesting coincidence Captain Richard D. Screven, of New Orleans (No. 184), the Adjutant of the Second Florida Regiment, was present when Randolph Bryan effected his descent and aided in disentangling him from his balloon.

On the trip the balloon had made a half-moon circuit of some fifteen miles.

John Randolph Bryan married February 19, 1867, Margaret Randolph Minor, born November 25, 1845, daughter of William W. Minor and Mary Waters Terrell. They had children as follows:

- 322. John Randolph Bryan, b. Jan. 9, 1868.

107. ST. GEORGE TUCKER COALTER BRYAN was born at Eagle Point, October 23, 1843.

Was for four years preceding the war a student at the Episcopal High School, near Alexandria, Va. He entered the Confederate Army in 1861 as a private in the Second Company of Richmond Howitzers—a field battery of artillery that saw service second to none in the Army of Northern Virginia—and except during periods of illness and special detail he served zealously with his company to the end of the war. He was wounded at the Battle of Sailor's Creek, two days before General Lee's surrender at Appomattox, and so was not present on that fateful day. After the war he went to work for several years and then to the University of Virginia, and graduated in Analytical Chemistry and Metallurgy, and for many years has been engaged in mining in Nevada and California. He has remained single.

108. JOSEPH BRYAN was born at Eagle Point, August 13, 1845.

He lives at his home "Laburnum," near Richmond, Virginia, and is editor of Richmond Times. He was also one of the founders of the "Richmond Locomotive Works"—the largest establishment of its kind in the South.

Joseph Bryan (No. 108) entered the Confederate service in 1863, but owing to a bad fracture of an arm he did not take active field service until 1864. He then joined Company D, of Colonel John S. Mosby's command and served as a private, "one of the first four," continuously up to the surrender by General R. E. Lee.

He was wounded twice in a cavalry fight near Upperville, Virginia; and in the fight in Ashby's Gap, according to Colonel Mosby, a party of his men, of whom Joseph Bryan was one, "attacked and routed four times their own number, wounding and capturing nearly the whole force."

He married February 1, 1871, Isobel Lamont Stewart, born August 30, 1847, daughter of John Stewart, of Scotland and Mary Amanda, daughter of Robert Carter Williamson and Lucy Parke, daughter of Edward Pye Chamberlayne and Mary Bickerton Webb.

Robert Carter Williamson was son of John Williamson and Ann Cox, he being sixth in descent from the Thomas Williamson of Cobham Hall, County Kent, England, who, when the Monmouth rebellion failed, took refuge in Virginia, settling in Surrey County.

Edward Pye Chamberlayne was son of Thomas Chamberlayne and Wilhelmina, daughter of Honorable Colonel William Byrd and Lucy, daughter of Honorable Daniel Parke, Junior, and his wife, daughter of Colonel Philip Ludwell and Lucy, daughter of Captain Robert Higginson, a noted leader in the early wars with the Indians in Virginia.

Honorable Colonel Byrd (born 1674, died 1744) was son of Colonel William Byrd who settled in Henrico County, Virginia, was Member of House of Burgesses 1679-1704, Member of Council 1681, and Adjutant-General of Virginia in 1687.

Honorable Daniel Parke, Junior, was son of Honorable Daniel Parke, of Essex County, England, but living in York County, Virginia, 1652. The latter was Justice of the Peace in 1655, High Sheriff 1659, Member of House of Burgesses 1660-70 and Treasurer of Virginia in 1677. His wife was Rebecca Evelyn.

Colonel Philip Ludwell of James City County, Virginia, was Deputy Secretary of State of Virginia and Member of Council in 1674.

John Stewart (born April 1, 1806, died March 11, 1885), was son of Bryce Stewart and Marion, daughter of Daniel Kerr and Janet Spence, all of Scotland. The Parish records of Rothesay contain many generations of Stewart intermarried with the Spence, McMillan and Lamont families.

He married February 9, 1882, Mary Sidney Caldwell Scott, born September 4, 1860, daughter of Doctor William Walter Scott and Eliza Snell, daughter of Elisha Perkins Miller of Caldwell County, North Carolina, and Sidney, daughter of Robert Caldwell and Elizabeth Snell.

William Walter Scott was son of William Copeland Scott and Martha, daughter of Gabriel White and Absilla, daughter of General Joseph Riddick of North Carolina; and grandson of Joseph Scott and Elizabeth, daughter of Joseph Ratcliffe and his wife Sarah; and great-grandson of Joseph Scott and daughter of Doctor J. Parker—all of North Carolina.

Elisha P. Miller was son of Reverend Robert Johnstone Miller and Mary, daughter of John Perkins and Catherine Lowrance of Lincoln, North Carolina.

Reverend Robert J. Miller (born at Baldovie near Dunder, Scotland) was a member of the Scottish Episcopal Church. After coming to America, he fought through the Revolution, receiving a severe sword cut in the face. He then studied for the ministry in North Carolina.

123. MAJOR HENRY BRYAN was born October 31, 1835, and died July 26, 1879.

As a gallant soldier of the Confederacy, Major Bryan rendered valuable services on the staff of General John B. Magruder, commanding the Army of the Peninsula in 1862, and while acting as his Adjutant-General he was severely wounded in two places and had his horse killed under him in the engagement at "Malvern Hill," July 1, 1862.

After General Magruder was transferred to Galveston, Texas, Major Bryan was assigned as Assistant Adjutant-General on the staff of General P. T. Beauregard, at Charleston, South Carolina, with whom he remained until the close of hostilities.

His report on the bombardment of Charleston by the Federal fleet, as well as his graphic account of the damage done to the city and the unconcerned manner with which the citizens moved around attending to their duties, makes an interesting sketch of the times.

A poetical tribute to Major Bryan reads as follows:

"No knight of olden time with stainless sword,
Bound by the gentle laws of chivalry
To service of his lady, and our Lord,
Was braver or more pure in heart than he,
As soldier fighting on a stricken field,
Or in the burdened life of civic ways,
Truth was his armor; Honor the fair shield
He bore. All words of love or earned praise
Are far too weak to paint this noble heart;
Now lying silent, where the live-oaks wave
Their tangled mosses, where with kindly art
The grasses weave above his quiet grave."

He married September 1, 1870, Jane Wallace Howard, born October 16, 1837, daughter of Reverend Charles Wallace Howard and Susan Jett, daughter of General Jett Thomas; and grandson of Charles Howard and Jean, daughter of Honorable Charles Wallace and Mary, daughter of Captain George Anderson and Deborah Grant, who were married in Trinity Church, New York, October 31, 1763, and went at once to the colony of Georgia at Savannah to make their home.

Charles Howard was son of Samuel Howard and Anna, daughter of John Lillie, (born 1728, died 1765), and Abigail Breck.

138. COLONEL JOHN SCREVEN, of Savannah, Georgia, was born September 18, 1827, and died January 8, 1900.

Colonel John Screven (No. 138), was born in Savannah, Georgia. Many of his early days were spent at the school of Bolmar, West Chester County, Pennsylvania, and at Hart's Edge Hill School at or near Princeton, New Jersey, and later at Franklin College, Athens, Georgia.

Several years after his return to Savannah he studied law and after admission to the bar he practiced for a short time, before he became a planter. In 1851 he was elected a Justice of the Inferior Court of Chatham County and held that office until the abolition of that court. The Savannah Volunteer Guards elected him in 1857 their captain, raising him from the rank of private.

On the 3d of January, 1861, he and a detachment of the Guards, with detachments from other commands, was ordered by the Governor of the State of Georgia to occupy Fort Pulaski. Under his command the Guards, as two companies, enlisted in the Confederate service for sixty days, then for six months; and after the enlistment as three companies, forming a battalion on the 1st of March, 1862, he was commissioned Major of Artillery in the Confederate Army and placed in command of the Guards' Battalion, afterwards known as the 18th Georgia Battalion.

In December, 1862, he was detached, and ordered to the Military Telegraph, and in December, 1863, he was ordered to the Savannah, Atlanta, and the Atlantic & Gulf Railroads, of which corporations he had been president since 1859, and which he held until 1880.

Some time before the approach of Sherman's army he was promoted to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel and raised a regiment of nine companies for the defense of the river lines of the City of Savannah.

He was elected Mayor of the City of Savannah in 1869, and thereafter several times successively. In 1877 he was elected one of the delegates to the Constitutional Convention of Georgia, and in 1880 he became an associate arbitrator of the Southern Railway and Steamship Associations.

Very sincerely yours.

GENERATION VII.

1—2—9—15—35—90.

275. CAPTAIN JOSIAH BEDON was born May 30, 1833, and died May 28, 1864.

He was one of the most beautiful characters of the many descending from the Pendarvis-Bedon marriage of 1750.

If there was a man born to suit the motto of his ancestors, Joe Bedon was one; his simplicity and integrity proclaiming him one whose nature was "to be, rather than appear to be."

He graduated from the South Carolina College, after which he read law and made his home at Walterboro, county seat of Colleton County, where the Bedon family had lived since Major Richard Bedon, son of the pioneer, settled "Horseshoe."

Upon the first tocsin of the War of Secession he raised a company with which he served at Fort Walker in the Battle of Hilton Head, after which he served continuously in the Army of Northern Virginia until he was wounded at the battle of Seven Pines. Upon his convalescence, his wound incapacitating him from further infantry service, he was offered a special commission to England, but he refused to absent himself from active field service. Whereupon he joined the cavalry as a member of the Charleston Light Dragoons, with whom he again went to Virginia, where he, with O'Hear, Middleton, Holmes and Miles gave up their lives in a bunch at Hawe's Shops, May 28, 1864.

He married April 19, 1860, Mary Camfield McLure, born March 2, 1839, daughter of Thomas McLure, of Chester, South Carolina (born September 15, 1800), and Ann Ferris (born September 21, 1804), daughter of David Camfield and Phoebe Roberts, daughter of Doctor Caleb Halsted and Abigail Lyon.

Doctor Halsted was son of Caleb Halsted (born July 8, 1721), and Rebecca, daughter of Robert Ogden and his second wife, Phoebe Roberts.

276. DOCTOR HYDER DAVIE BEDON was born March 5, 1835, and died October 2, 1897.

He graduated at the South Carolina Medical College just previous to the breaking out of the War of Secession. Refusing a commission as surgeon, he enlisted as a private in the first regiment of South Carolina cavalry to leave the State for the front in Virginia, where he continuously remained throughout the whole war. Upon the cessation of hostilities he joined his brother William in Mississippi, where he practiced his profession. Some few years after his marriage he moved to Columbia, Tennessee, where he made his home.

He married September 27, 1875, Rosa Jackson Eastin, born March 22, 1855, daughter of John Donelson Eastin and Amanda Galloway.

They had children as follows:

658. Eva May Bedon, b. Oct. 17, 1876.
